Keeping Watch Over Human Rights

Informal Sector Service Centre (INSEC) has been publishing Nepal Human Rights Year Book (NHRYB) since 1992. Ensuring the systematic documentation of data and factual descriptions of cases of human rights violation are the main purpose of this publication. Each edition of Nepal Human Rights Year Book documents human rights violations and abuses during the past year. In the last 29 years, Nepal has experienced political and social changes which are incorporated by analyzing its relevance to human rights principles and practices.

The Yearbook remains an important document for investigating cases of human rights violation for ensuring justice, reparation to conflict victims, compensate those injured, arrested, and mistreated during political movements, and victims of torture. Similarly, INSEC's documentation is also widely used as a reference to understand Nepal's conflict and it remains useful even after 14 years of the Comprehensive Peace Accord.

State organs use Nepal Human Rights Year Book as a reference for validating the official evidences. Similarly, United Nations Agencies and international communities are also referring to INSEC's documentation while analyzing the human rights situation of Nepal.

The cases of human rights violations and abuses have slightly decreased in 2020 but there has been increase in numbers and severity of violence against women and children. The number of cases of rape of women and girls should be matter of serious concern not only to the state and human rights defenders but also to members of any civilized society. INSEC strongly recommends the need to further enhance existing state mechanisms for the protection of women and girls through proper law enforcement.

This year, incidents of beating, misbehaviour, abuse, and killing of women by family members, including spouse over issues of dowry have also been documented. INSEC has also recorded cases of honour killing by parents and families following inter-caste marriages, and for not marrying the chosen man (usually man of the family's choice because girls are expected to comply with parental wishes). These acts were undertaken to preserve the so-called prestige of the family in the society. Further, INSEC has also documented the cases of involving witchcraft allegation, some of which were "reconciled" with the involvement of local government representatives. These are examples of poor law enforcement and it reveals the pathetic situation of women rights.

Although, the Constitution of Nepal has guaranteed non-discrimination and criminalized caste-based discrimination, INSEC has documented severe cases of caste-based discrimination and untouchability also in 2020. We therefore, suggest the need for the state to evaluate its measures for ending all forms of caste, class, and gender-based discrimination and devise mechanism that can actually make a difference.

INSEC's representatives in 77 districts monitored and documented the cases of human rights violation and abuses throughout the year and validated their reports at different levels, including data maintained at the Women, Children, and Senior Citizen Service Centre at the District Police Office.

For six months, the country was under lockdown and various types of restrictions that were imposed to tackle the COVID-19 pandemic. It can therefore be assumed that the number of human rights violation cases could also have been underreported in 2020 owing to restrictions in movements and difficulties faced by victims to seek justice during the lockdown.

The lockdown also affected court procedures and prosecutions. It could be possible that the fewer cases reported in 2020 were also a result of the delays in justice delivery and reporting for reasons associated with the lockdowns. This delay has violated rights to justice of the victims and also detainees. Cases of beating and polygamy registered in the beginning of the year had remained to be decided. Similarly, justice from both quasi-judicial institutions were also delayed.

This Yearbook has analyzed the human rights situation of 2020. The number of cases have declined, possibly because of COVID-19 and its hurdles. INSEC's district representatives and offices conduct verification of data twice with the law enforcement agencies and also carried out follow-ups of cases reported in earlier years. The publication is therefore public property and a common document for all stakeholders to use as a reference for human rights protection and promotion.

We have analyzed strengths and gaps of the performance of state organs vis-à-vis human rights concerns, which we expect to assist towards the exercise of the separation of powers and ensure their contributions to reduce obstacles in human rights protection, promotion, and fulfillment. Similarly, we have also reviewed some of the focus areas of the earlier NHYRBs to remind the social and political transformations of the past 29 years. Some of the issues reported in the past include the armed conflict, impunity, criminalization of politics, importance of periodic elections, peace, and the promulgation of the Constitution. Further, this yearbook has also included six issues related to economic, social, and cultural rights based on focused studies in the provinces.

It is an honour to share the Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2021. I acknowledge the contribution of all the 77 district representatives, group members of the editing team, and staffs of INSEC for their contributions.

INSEC believes that the cooperation and coordination with political parties and their leaders, bureaucracy, judiciary, national human rights institutions, Nepal Army, Nepal Police, Armed Police Force, victims and their families, and civil society are equally important to ensure both quality and continuity of this publication. We believe that this yearbook will remain as an important evidence of human rights situation in days to come.

In addition, I express my sincere thanks to the national and international donors who have supported us in our mission to protect democracy, promote human rights-friendly rule of law and social justice.

Finally, I express my gratitude to all contributors for their role in analyzing the human rights documentation and request their continued support for enhancing the quality of NHRYB.

Chapter 1

Accountability Towards Commitment

Background

Informal Sector Service Centre INSEC, established to maintain an oversight on the state on its accountability and commitments by increasing awareness, lobbying and mobilizing people for human rights after the popular uprising of 1989/90, began publishing Nepal Human Rights Year Book from 1992. It began publishing the document to fill the gap of the inadequacy of reliable documentation on the human rights situation. Over the years the Nepal Human Rights Yearbook has been important reference for human rights defenders, civil society, the general public, and anyone interested in the human rights. The Nepal Human Rights Year Book includes all cases of human rights violations during the past year, with factual information, interpretation, and analysis to measure the performance of the state in terms of accountability and delivery of its commitments related to human rights.

The Nepal Human Rights Yearbook 2021, includes factual information and statistics on cases of human rights violations in 2020. It has analyzed and documented the role of the state in promotion and protection of human rights through the legislative, executive, and judiciary. The investigation and documentation of human rights violations is an outcome report from all 77 districts of Nepal. The information is collected by district-based INSEC human rights representatives who make up the foundation of both INSEC and this document. INSEC representatives collect primary data and verify the information through the victims, their families, local administration, political parties, human rights activists, and other stakeholders. This year INSEC began using a mobile application and web-based software for collecting information on cases of human rights violation in the districts that is then verified by INSEC's staffs at provincial and central offices.

INSEC upholds the universal principles of human rights, international treaties to which Nepal is a party, and the Constitution of Nepal as guidance for its investigations and documentation. It investigates and documents the human rights using the rights provided by the Constitution as a yardstick focusing on the people’s rights to respectable life, freedom, education, health and fair trial and social justice, child rights, equality, social security, food, shelter, and rights against preventive imprisonment. It believes that rule of law, transparency and accountability are the fundamental conditions that need to be fulfilled by a human rights-friendly state, as it is a precondition for assuring social justice, democracy, and judicial independence and human rights friendly policies.

The changes that have taken place in the political and social sectors have transformed the fundamental structure of the state. State’s accountability for social justice is a basic condition for assuring rule of law in a democratic system. However, there are reasons to believe that the state’s commitment to the peace process that began after the 12-points agreement and comprehensive peace accord has remained in shadow.

The Universal Periodic Review (UPR) process established by the United Nations General Assembly in 2006 to review progress of Human Rights commitments made by member states. Nepal participated in the first review in January 2011 and in the second in November 2015 and third review was held on January 2021. The performance of the state has been measured against the commitments made by Nepal during the Universal Periodic Review (UPR).

KILLING

Number of People Killed in 2020 (By Province)

Right to life is one of the most important rights but, people are killed in many instances. This year seven males were killed by the state. INSEC documented the killing of 343 people including 158 female, 184 male and one third gender by others in 2020.

BEATING

Number of Victims, 2020

Number of Victims in 2020 (By Province)

Incident of beating occurs on regular basis. But, incidents of beating on human rights defenders were also documented by INSEC. In 2020, 320 people were victims in the incident of beating. This includes 93 beaten by the state and 227 beaten by others. These incidents occur when a person fails to control his/her anger. Majority of beating incidents are settled or reconciled as per our documentation.

The government's five-year Human Rights Action Plan (2020- 2025) on its action plans on human rights has been promulgated during the year. The yearbook has raised major concerns about human rights, reported on human rights violations by district, and reported on the activities and practices of different state agencies and has also included representative cases on the economic, cultural, and social rights.

Continuity of Impunity: Impunity and Disregard for Transitional Justice

The Supreme Court had quashed an appeal from the government on its order barring pardon to serious human right violations during the conflict on April 26, 2020. The bench had justices Deep Kumar Karki, Mira Khadka, Bishwamvar Prasad Shrestha, Ishwor Prasad Khatiwada, and Dr. Ananda Mohan Bhattarai.

The government was not accountable for complying to the order of the Supreme Court judges Kalyan Shrestha, Baidya Nath Upadhyaya, and Cholendra Shamsher JBR who had asked the government to assure sanctions to violators of human rights during the conflict and not to seek other means of forceful reconciliation. IN-SEC has been continuously advocating against a general amnesty and pardons for conflict era crimes. There has been no progress towards compliance with the Supreme Court order despite continuous advocacy by human rights defenders. The first step towards compliance would have been to amend the law on Investigation of The Enforced Disappearances Enquiry, Truth, and Reconciliation Commission Act, 2071 (2014).

Also, as in previous years, ending impunity did not become a priority of the government, elected representatives, and the political parties. This has been an issue for the past 14 years. Similarly, many tasks that post-conflict countries are mandatorily required to accomplish also remain to be addressed. As a result there has been little or no progress towards identifying those engaged in serious human rights violations and bringing them to justice, nor has there been progress in the identification of the victims for providing justice and reparations for establishing peace.

There were many innocent people who were affected by the conflict, some had become orphaned and others persons with disability. There have been no concrete effort towards addressing the concerns of such people. The delays in the processes and inactions have given reason to suspect that those responsible for assuring transitional justice could be dragging their feet to possibly tire out the victims rather than providing them justice; which however, is unlikely happen as justice and reparations are foundational for lasting peace. The impunity could provide immediate relief for some individuals and groups and also provide political protection but that could also result in counter violence and its repercussions. Despite these possibilities, the concerned agencies have not made any effort to address this issue.

The government has failed to deliver to its commitments made during the first and second cycle of Universal Periodic Reviews, and the Supreme Court order that had required the amendment of the transitional justice laws. Instead, the government has appointed two officials to the transitional justice commissions on January 20, 2020, against the wishes of the victims as well as human rights advocates. Even after a year of the appointments there were no major initiatives towards addressing the demands for justice of the victims.

In its four years of office, Truth and Reconciliation Commission registered 62,000 complaints and Commission of Investigation on Enforced Disappeared Persons had registered only 2,700 cases. The non-performance of the both these commissions can be attributed to differences between the officials, partisan interests, lack of skilled human resources, and loopholes in the laws and lack of commitment to resolve the issues among the concerned authorities.

Even after the 14 years of the Comprehensive Peace Accord (CPA), there has been no consolidated assessment of loss of lives and the overall cost of the conflict in economic terms. Clause 5.2.3 of the CPA has committed to inform the families the whereabouts of those enforcedly disappeared and killed in the conflict within 60 days along with names and addresses. The inability to meet this commitment has today become an example of the ignorance towards the fulfillment of the commitment in the accord.

Appalling situation of non-implementation of recommendations of the National Human Rights Commission

A document of the National Human Rights Commission (NHRC) reporting on the status of execution of its recommendations by state agencies in 2020 said that only 10.5 percent of

ECONOMIC, SOCIAL AND CULTURAL RIGHTS

Majority of people are being victims of Economic, Social and Cultural (ESC) rights as these rights are difficult to identify. The picture may be bigger and larger than the real documented incidents of ESC rights. INSEC documented 16 victims of ESC rights violation during 2020 related to the capture of property, deprivation of wages and expelling from the job etc.

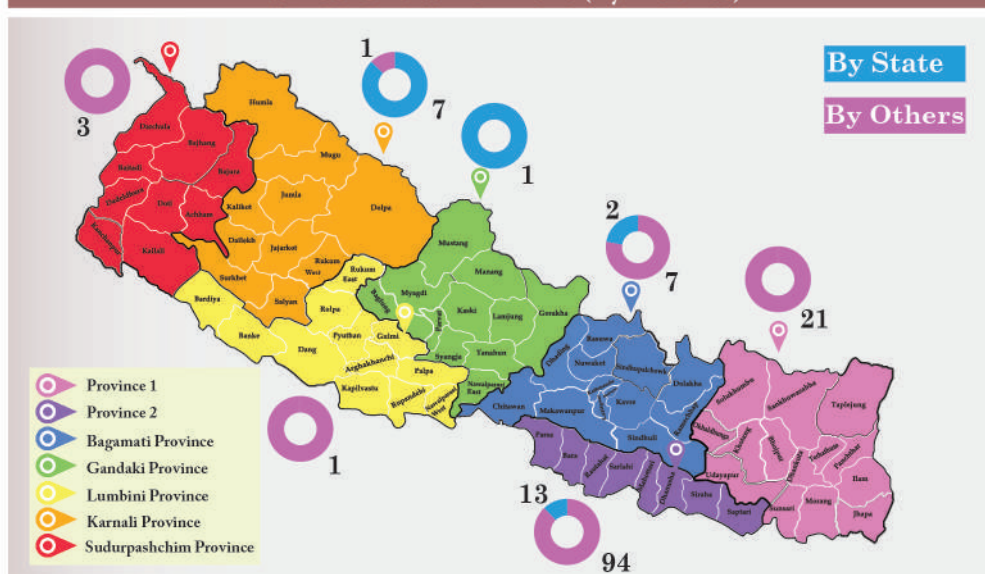

INJURED

Number of Victims, 2015-2020

Number of Victims in 2020 (By Province)

In 2020, 150 people across the nation were injured in the incidents of explosion, firing, clash, and beatings. Four female were injured due to acid attack. The government announced to bear the expenses of the treatment of those injured in clash or in police firing. However; victims complained the process of being very lengthy.

286 individuals accused of violations were brought under the judicial process in last 20 years. The amnesty of about 90 percent of those accused has raised questions of accountability towards democracy and rule of law. Out of 843 recommendations made by the Commission, only three percent were addressed. Within this period, the Commission had provided 1,195 recommendations among which 940 were related to the armed conflict.

The publication of the report of NHRC has given hope of punishment to those guilty of serious human rights violations. The publication of the recommendations is a positive step towards continuing investigations and for lobbying for justice in the coming days. However, the NHRC report was published only as the tenure in office of the Commissioners had come to an end, which has pointed to the accountability of Commission itself as it would have had more time to pursue its recommendations had they come earlier.

Nepal's Participation in the Universal Periodic Review

The UPR is a process coordinated by Human Rights Council of the United Nations to periodically review the situation of human rights in member states. It provides a platform for countries to present the efforts they have made for the improvement of the human rights situation and to also demonstrate their accountability to commitments made at the previous UPR cycles. The UPR is a process that began in 2006.

Nepal submitted its third UPR report in October 2020. The report mentioned the implementation status of commitments made during second cycle of the review but is largely silent on the issues that were underachieved. The report has underreported on progress in transitional justice, women, gender and caste based discrimination, child labor, and other harmful traditional social practices. Nepal began participating in the UPR in 2011. There were 191 recommendations in the first cycle among which the government had accepted 135. Similarly, there were 195 recommendations in the second cycle of UPR in 2015, among which the government had accepted 152.

Countries participating in the 2020 review made recommendations on the Constitution, transitional justice, torture, arbitrary arrest, non-judicial and mass killings, human rights conventions, child rights, NHRC, human trafficking, and natural disasters, among others. Among the recommendations of the first and second cycles of UPR that the government had accepted, progress was not satisfactory in transitional justice. The inability of fulfill this international commitment on transitional justice remains a situation of concern.

As in both the first and second cycles, INSEC, as the secretariat of non-governmental organizations for civil society reporting, presented its report for UPR. The report has included overall human rights' situation of Nepal, human rights situation of women, children, Dalits, indigenous groups, Muslims, and other minorities. The report has made recommendations on matters concerning the National Human Rights Institutions, human rights defenders, extra-judicial killings, and transitional justice, among others.

The constitution has ensured right to speech and freedom of assembly. Apart from this, in some places, the government-imposed restriction to organize, sit-in, rally, demonstration and assembly stating that such action has obstructed and violated the right to commute of citizens. INSEC documented 94 victims of deprivation of right to assembly in 2020.

Fifth National Human Rights Action Plan

Nepal Government has published its Fifth Human Rights Action Plans in 2020. The plans made for the next five years aim to establish a human rights-friendly culture through development, protection, and empowerment as specified by the Constitution, international treaties to which Nepal is a state party and the fundamental values of human rights. The plan has also specified responsibilities of all levels of government for attaining the goals and targets.

There is need of orientation and training of representatives of all levels of governments and officials of concerned bodies and for strict directives for implementation. INSEC has suggested that the government should include civil society organizations (CSOs) as partners for implementation and monitoring of the action plans. However, there might be difficulties in for CSOs in supporting the task owing to insufficient resources with national agencies, legal provisions for facilitating the work, and also the lack of adequate indicators for monitoring progress.

Rule of Law and Democratic Practice

A press release from the Office of the President announced the dissolution of parliament towards the end of the year in accordance with the recommendation made by the Prime Minister KP Sharma Oli. The press release said elections would be held on April 30 and May 10, 2021. A faction of the ruling Communist Party of Nepal (NCP) led by Madhav Kumar Nepal and Pushpa Kamal Dahal as well as the Nepali Congress party (main opposition) responded that the decision was against democratic stability envisioned by the Constitution. The Supreme Court was hearing 14 petitions challenging the Prime Minister's decision at the Constitutional Court when this report was prepared.

The appointments made by the government by amending the law on the recommendations to Constitutional bodies including the NHRC was also controversial. The controversy was over the amendment of the law, which the government said was because the leader of the opposition party and speaker of the lower house had repeatedly been absent in the meetings that prevented a quorum. The passing of the ordinance and recommending appointments and the dissolution of the House of Representatives immediately after the appointments weakened the accountability of the appointees and also weakened the practice of parliamentary hearing of recommended candidates.

Both the summer and winter sessions of parliament were affected by the infighting of the ruling NCP that affected the enactment of various laws in the house. It was apparent that both the ruling party members and those of the opposition party seemed oblivious of encouraging a culture of the rule through ordinances owing to ineffectiveness of parliament.

Situation of Human Rights and COVID-19

The Corona Virus Disease first reported in late 2019 had grown into a pandemic by early 2020. In the end of 2020 Nepal had 260,593 COVID-19 positive cases and 1,856 deaths.

A large number of people lost their jobs and many businesses were forced to shut down after the COVID-19 outbreak. The government faced mounting public pressure over its delay in making arrangement for controlling the spread of the virus and treatment of those infected, and was also under pressure to evacuate Nepalis stranded in foreign countries. The government had evacuated 175 students from Wuhan in China on February 15, 2020. But, it was also criticized for failing to do the same for citizens stranded in other countries. Nepal declared a lockdown from 24 March to July 21, 2020. During this period, the number of infections rose from two to 17,994. Many Nepali working in India returned but were not able to cross the border for the inability of the government to anticipate the return and plan their re-entry. This caused hundreds of people to be held up at the border for a number of days. The number of infections increased due to unmanaged quarantine centres, lack of protective measures and weaknesses in patient management. During this period the government was able to add 942 Intensive Care Units (ICUs) and 496 ventilators. The efforts of local governments to manage the spread of the pandemic were commendable as were the government decision to provide free tests for COVID-19. The experience with the pandemic has indicated for the need for greater preparations for dealing with similar situations in the coming days.

State and Human Rights Judiciary

The Government had announced lockdown from March 24, 2020 to prevent the spread of COVID-19 infections. The lockdown had affected all the government agencies and the general public. The judiciary was also affected, and this had overshadowed the fulfillment of fundamental human rights of the people. The Supreme Court took a special decision to continue with habeas corpus hearings, arrest warrants, and cases related to the child rehabilitation centres or correctional institutions. The Supreme Court also made different decisions on cases related to people's rights to food, health, and right to return home. The Supreme Court also ordered changes to how the court date should be counted by considering the period of the lockdown as something that would not affect the count.

ARREST

Number of Victims in 2020 (By Province)

This year, 370 people were victims of arrest of which 31 were female. INSEC documented the incident of arrest by police without producing arrest warrant. Incidents of violation during assembly, re-arrest, and arbitrary arrest are documented under this heading.

After 2007, the Human Rights Year Books have been publishing the issues of insensitivity of the state towards transitional justice. The Supreme Court rejected the governments' appeal to the court to review its earlier decision on pardoning individuals who had committed serious human rights violations during the conflict.

Legislative

Many government decisions were not implemented owing to the infighting in the ruling NCP. The infighting also led to abrupt ends to the sessions of the parliament causing a number of bills to remain held up, including halted citizenship bill, bill on National Human Rights Commission, Media Council bill and other bills directly related to human rights

The Government had adopted different prohibitory actions to reduce the impacts of COVID-19, and infections began to rise after the relaxation of the measures. There were multiple instances of violation of the Constitutional provision of providing free treatment for primary diseases. The Government was unable to investigate and control the high cost charged by private hospitals during the pandemic.

In 2020 there were over 300 deaths due to natural disasters. The government had not been able to act promptly to resettle the affected people and also to provide and medical assistance. Even though educational institutions began reopening at the end of the year, the rights of students to education was violated. Further, there has been no reduction in cases of violence against women. There were also violations of the rights against caste based discrimination, to life and good health. The issue of migrant workers was also a concern.

Executive

The government paid little attention to issues raised in parliament and many recommendations were remained unaddressed. The government also resorted to bringing ordinances instead to trying to get legislation through parliament. Low attendance of ministers in the parliament and ignorance of parliamentary recommendations also continued in 2020.

The Prime Minister dissolved the House of Representatives on December 20, 2020, which was a result of the infighting in the ruling NCP. Elections were announced for April/ May 2021 but the Supreme Court was also hearing 14 petitions challenging the dissolution, which raised questions over the ability of Nepal to have elections as planned.

Provincial Issues on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights

As in previous years, this yearbook also has chapters on the status of selected Economic, Social and Cultural rights in different provinces. These sections cover tea laborers in Ilam and Jhapa districts; the allegations of witchcraft and the human rights of the victims in districts of Province 2; the effects of natural disasters in Sindhupal-

Children cover a large part of the country. The National Census in 2011 shows that 44.4% of population is under 18 years of age. Children are vulnerable to various kinds of exploitation. Children are physically weak than adult and they cannot differentiate between right and wrong. According to the documentation of INSEC, this year 1,461 children were victims of child rights violation of which majority of incidents (989) were related to rape. While analyzing this, the situation is gruesome. In majority of sensitive incidents related to rape and sexual abuse, boys were found to be involved and such incidents being pending has raised the question mark on justice.

chowk district, problems faced by sugarcane growers in Lumbini Province; prevalence of child marriage in Salyan district; and the situation of returnee migrant workers from India after the COVID-19 outbreak in the districts in the Sudurpaschim Province.

Human Rights Violations in 2020: Facts and data

INSEC documented 5,543 victims of human rights violations in 2020. The same number in 2019 was 6,642. This year, there were 675 victims (58 women and 617 men) of violations of human rights and 4,868 victims (4,271 women, 595 men, one unidentified, and one third-gender) abuse.

There were seven killings by the state and nine victims of torture. A total of 370 people were arrested, and there were 48 victims of caste based discrimination, 25 victims of inhuman behavior, 94 victims whose right to assembly was violated, 25 victims of threats and 320 victims of beatings.

All Kinds of Violence against Women

In 2020, 2,606 victims of violence against women were reported. There were 32 victims of attempted trafficking, 1,346 victims of domestic violence, 58 victims of witchcraft allegation, 648 victims of rape, 152 victims of attempted rape, 62 victims of sexual abuse and 25 victims of trafficking.

This year, there were 102 women were victims of killings by family members. The same number was 129 last year. Three women were killed for not bringing enough dowry, and another 12 faced violence related to the same issue. There were many instances of police refusing to file complaints, particularly in the districts of Province 2.

Parental side of Sangita Kapar of Dhanusha District, Bateshwor Rural Municipality – 2 accused Anil Kapar, 25 of killing his wife on May 29, 2020 on the dispute raised due to insufficient dowry. Father of Sangita claimed that Anil tortured his daughter for dowry and she was beaten and killed by hanging. He also said the body was bleeding, one tooth was broken and there were bruises in different body parts. A complaint made by the victim's side was not registered in Area Police Office, Mahendranagar on May 30. It was however registered in District Police Office on July 22. The accused was not arrested till the end of the year.

There was lack of will power from police to arrest the convicts who run away after the crimes. However, there is provision to process forward by the police even though the complaint is not registered in criminal cases.

The parents of a 31-year-old woman filed a complaint against husband, father and mother in laws in Area Police Office, Kalyanpur, Saptari on February 10, 2020 on the charge of killing their daughter and hanging her on the tree. The husband of the victim used to beat her raising question over her characters and the parents of the victim used to send her by counseling her to return her home. The mother of victim filed an application of mandamus order at the High Court's Rajbiraj Bench on February 14. The police had not filed a formal complaint and the case had not been resolved at the end of the year.

As per section 38, sub section 30 of Constitution on Nepal, no woman shall be subjected to physical, mental, sexual, psychological, or other form of violence or exploitation on grounds of religion, social, cultural tradition, practice or on any other grounds. Such act shall be punishable by law, and the victim shall have the right to obtain compensation in accordance with law. Although the law protected the rights of women and girls, the increased numbers of violence against them specially the cases of rape brought serious concerns for the state. .

INSEC representatives in all 77 districts visited the women, children, and senior citizen service centres at the police offices. Majority of the cases registered in these centres had been reconciled. Violence against women in families have been increasing every year and not all of these cases are reported.

Child Rights

In 2020, there were 1,461 victim of violations of child rights. There were 989 victims of rape, 356 of sexual abuse, and 19 of corporal punishment at schools. Children faced the risk of exploitation trafficking, sexual violence and deprivation of education and health facilities. Majority of the school buildings were not persons with disability friendly, and most schools lacked proper toilets for girls. Free education was not implemented and schools continued to charge payments under various pretexts.

Guardians of seven students filed a complaint with the police accusing, a 46-year-old, director of the Adarsha Secondary English School of beating and injuring their children on February 25, 2020. The teenagers were allegedly punished for not complying with the school discipline. The victims had injuries and bruises on their bodies. Two of the injured students had been admitted at the Gajendra Narayan Singh Hospital on February 25. The father of one of the victims said no action had been taken against the accused in end December 2020.

Conclusion

The concern of stakeholders has remained largely ignored while dealing with the transitional justice process. Even after 14 years of the CPA there has been little progress in transitional justice, which has resulted from the lack of commitment to address the issues among political parties and other stakeholders. Violence against children and women has also continued to increase. There have been cases of failure of the state to bring suspects of crime under the judicial process, and that of police denying to register cases; there has also been lack of efforts to seek and arrest suspects who have absconded after committing crimes.

The practice of reconciling cases of violence against women have also continued and there are still tendencies to keep these incidents within

The incidents of violence against women is alarming despite of several attempts made by the State and non-governmental organizations for its minimization whether it is in the name of rape or domestic violence. There are no significant decreases in the incidents of mistreatment in witchcraft allegation. In 2020, INSEC documented one woman victim of violation by the state and 2,605 women victims of abuses. The majority of incidents on violence against women were settled in an agreement according to the data from police. Women reconcile with husband and family members despite of being inflicted with torture.

the family rather than report them to authorities. There is also urgent need for effective implementation of human rights action plans, the localization of sustainable development goals, and for ending both impunity and growing criminalization of politics by ensuring the accountability towards the commitment.

Recommendations

1. Need to end impunity by ensuring accountability of government and political parties through concluding the transitional justice process in compliance with the Supreme Court orders.
2. Implement the accepted recommendations during the previous cycle of UPR and disseminate the achievements periodically.

3. Ensure effective implementation of national action plans on human rights.
4. Ensure effective legal arrangements and their enforcement for reducing violence against women.
5. Make political parties accountable to their commitments to the provisions in the Constitution and various political agreements for ensuring human rights and social justice.
6. Implement the recommendations of the National Human Rights Commission.

Review of the Social and Political Issues Raised in the Last 29 Years of Nepal Human Rights Year Book

The Informal Sector Service Centre (INSEC) began publishing the Nepal Human Rights Year Book in 1992 to respond to the dearth of reliable data for measuring the situation of human rights in the country. Over the years the yearbook has become an important document for all interested in understanding the human rights situation in Nepal as it includes information on all major incidents, with details, reported both in terms of numbers and the impacts. The yearbook not only analyzes and reports on human rights violations, but also interprets the roles played by the state agencies in protecting and promoting human rights.

Nepal has undergone major political and social changes in last 29 years, which have been in the yearbook. These records have been used for dispensing justice to those injured in conflicts, political movements and for victims to seek relief after different incidents. It has also continued to serve as an important reference for researchers and investigators. The contributions of the yearbook towards society and the state since over the last 29 years remains is something we look forward to hear from its users. The yearbook has always given importance to both entrenched and emerging social and political issues. We believe the topics covered need to be documented to caution to leaders and remind them of their commitments and to measure that against performance. This year we have attempted to reminisce on the issues raised by Nepal Human Rights yearbooks, contextualizing the sociopolitical space to assist the understanding of English language readers in the English version. The subjects include records of the armed conflict, impunity, criminalization of politics, the conduct of periodic elections, peace, and constitution-making. Many of the issues discussed in the following paragraphs related to the year and the sociopolitical context at the time but have still been discussed as many of the messages are relevant even today.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 1992

Due to the lack of awareness on human rights, people of Nepal have been violating each other's rights. Our social structure, level of awareness, narrowness of the political agendas and bogus commitments are the main reason behind human rights violation in Nepal.

Until and unless the major organs of the state eternalize their role to respect human rights: it is not possible to develop protection status of human rights. It is essential to monitor the situation of human rights. During the Panchayat Regime, we witnessed that the contemporary rulers claimed that human rights were guaranteed and its status was 'excellent' in the country.

Likewise, the prolonged debate of human rights is on-going even after the establishment of multiparty democracy and success of the peoples movement. After the formation of the new constitution, Nepal has committed towards ensuring the human rights by signing different international treaties and conventions. But all of these are just the policy frameworks. The citizens are more concerned about the practice of human rights.

In the same context, the present Home Minister once said that Nepal's human rights condition is the best in the entire world which drew the attention of those mainly working in human rights sector. If every government keeps claiming that the human rights condition is the best in their tenure, the movement of human rights can be affected. If the ruling party keeps praising their performance in human rights and the opposition keep criticizing it; the protection and promotion of human rights will be adversely affected.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 1993

The aim of any constitution can be fulfilled only if the values it embodies and sentiments captured are translated into implementation. The longevity of constitutions depend on effective implementation. Therefore, keeping watchover the implementation of the constitutional provisions, becomes the duty of all – the legislative, executive, judiciary, and all citizens from different walks of life. It is not enough to approve or sign on to international laws and conventions regarding human rights, the parliament and government must also make equal efforts for effective implementation. Since both the executive and legislature are not immune to encroachment of citizens' rights. The judiciary must also join in the vigilance. The courts must not only interpret laws and practice while resolving disputes but also must actively involve itself in the protection and promotion of fundamental human rights.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 1994

The head of the state or government must consider the needs, aspirations, and interests of people while ensuring constitutional rights. The democratic belief and values can be internalized only in nations where people can enjoy their rights and the democratic institutions exercise the rights in the interest of the people. The government dissolved parliament on July 10, 1994 invoking a right of the prime minister in the constitution. Even though the act was opposed by a section of the ruling party, the opposing parties and a large section of the people, Prime Minister Girija Prasad Koirala dissolved the parliament and announced the mid term election, after the Court upheld his decision.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 1995

The year was important in terms of the history of legislative exercises and the year saw a large number of parliamentary processes in practice. The parliament elected through the mid-term election was dissolved and was reestablished following a decision by the Court and new interpretations of the constitution regarding the parliamentary system in place in the country. The decision to restore parliament as per Article 53 (2), (3) of the contemporary Constitution of the Kingdom of Nepal 2047 (1990) and the dissolution as per article (4), had resulted in a verdict upholding the supremacy of parliament, which while doing so had also curbed the special right of prime minister. It was perhaps the first decision anywhere in the world where the right of the prime minister to dissolve parliament was made conditional. This resulted in a polity not of prime ministerial rule but that as desired by parliament. However, the executive remained indifferent to parliament, which was evidenced the low presence of ministers in parliamentary sessions. The parliament was disrupted time and again over opposition demands that the presence of the executive be ensured.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 1996

This was the year when the armed conflict began in Nepal. The armed insurgency began on February 13, 1996 with acts of terror in districts like Rolpa, Rukum, Jajarkot, Sindhuli, and Ramechhap. The government had undermined all standards in enforcing the law and rules in the name of suppressing this outbreak of violence. The other side, the Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist) too was largely ignorant of the fundamental rights of the people. The Government deployed police to search the Maoists and the security forces killed many innocent in the name of encounters with the Maoists. This is also the year INSEC began its documentation of the incidents related to the insurgency.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 1997

It is difficult to say when the criminalization of politics began in Nepal. The first difficulty was posed by the fact that the Nepali politics had never been inseparable from killing and violence in the quest of power. Secondly, killings and violent acts that would appear inhuman today were almost normalized at the time. Thirdly, as killings, violence, beatings had become inseparable entities of politics, it remained difficult to isolate what type of incidents were actually political crimes. Therefore, if using assistance of criminal elements for political gain and political protection crimes were to be considered as criminalization of politics, then Nepali politics has a long and continuous tradition of criminalization.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 1999

There were fractures of two large parties in the Nepali democratic movements, the Nepali Congress and the Communist Party of Nepal., Many new parties came into existence after their split. The communist party had many divisions in its 50-year history. The monarchy of Nepal continuously intervening into those parties and trying to weaken them. Similarly, the ruling class of the Indian Politics also trying to ensure their confidence and influence among the political actors including the political parties in Nepal.

Nepali communist fractions were divided over the dispute between Russia and China and the debate on whether or not China still had communism. There were also many instances of party divisions that were motivated by personal benefits of those in politics. The practice of destroying what party organization existed and halting expansion was also evident. Whatever might be the reasons for the party splits and motivations of those involved, it was obvious that they had become the target of some conspiracy. The formation, expansion, and dissolution of parties has revolved around these three powers in Nepal. The period post 1990 was one of political polarization. The unity of party had been successful and divisions unsuccessful. There was formation of communist front just before the political change of 1990 has left far-reaching effect on Nepal's communist movement. The polarization in the communist movement increased after 1990.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2000

It is a fact that democratic elections lead to arrangements centered on human rights. Such elections can bring diversity in the result and ensure the sustainability of the system. In an elected leadership, there will be control of power, and formation of a government with the institutionalization of balance in the leadership. Another outcome of democratic elections is enhancement the development through powerful media, citizen's power, and open and democratic political processes. Apart from making criticism on policies of government possible, competition in election also underscores the basic characteristic of a democratic system. Multiparty democratic systems adopt optional ideologies. Establishment of a democratic nation, privatization of government run and controlled media, control and coordination among security forces, development of an independent judiciary, and acquisition of full freedoms and respect of human rights are all possible in parliamentary democracy. Similarly, democratic elections are seen to assist the maintenance of national coherence. Democratization of elections also help in controlling extreme personal desires of the rulers and corruption. This is the outcome of democratization of election.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2001

The violence of the last five years in the name of Maoists people's movement was a result of political suppression. It was enhanced by the discriminatory traditions prevalent in the society. It was made explosive by political ideology. People in the crossfire of violence of both the Maoists and the Government wants to live in peace. The government that is responsible for removing barriers to people's normal lifestyles, had in the name of removing those barriers involved itself in violation of basic human rights. The government was largely unable to build moral pressure for peace through its political behavior making conflict resolution difficult. Conflict resolution depends upon the ability of government to build moral pressure.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2002

All three bodies of the state, legislative, executive and judiciary were mired in disputes. Members of parliament, were largely humiliated for facilities they had acquired on the basis of law. They had kept all the accounts transparent, while other sectors had continued to loot on various ways. All the ministries were competing to provide economic donations. Damages caused by Maoists were taken as lotteries and money was dispatched unnecessarily. Due to such acts of the executive, the members of parliament sought discretion over NRs. 1 million of development funds. Democracy was weakening as a result of failures of political leadership and personalities. When this happens the slowly overcome the ideologies and the political parties are not trusted leading to revolts. That was happening around us.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2003

Year 2002 was probably the darkest year in terms of human rights. Different provisions of the constitution were violated. It was violated with impunity even though it is the duty of all to protect the constitution as result both rule of law and political stability were not realized. Ministers themselves were involved in corruption and were brought under punishment. Corruption and irregularities peaked. The House of representatives was dissolved by Prime Minister Sher Bahadur Deuba and was supposed to have been reinstated based on precedence but was not. Even though the local governance act had a provision to allow extension of the term of elected local bodies by a year, it was not done. As result the country did not have any elected representatives.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2004

The 12 years of democratic practice had resulted in widespread political awareness. It had made young people aware of the old social structures and created desires for change. Periodic election has increased public participation at both the local and central levels. There was growing awareness that the conduct of state should be done on the basis of the vote rather than force. The rights of the political opposition and minorities were assured and people were able to strengthen their voice. Their participation increased in the lawmaking process. Assurance of civil and political rights provided them confidence to raise their voices against wrong doing and ineffective decisions made by the leadership. The ruling party faced a lot of protests of the opposition in the parliament regarding its approval of the Tanakpur treaty with India. The Court had upheld the position of those opposed to the treaty where the government was found in violation. Similarly, government faced a lot of criticism for appointing Dhruva Bahadur Pradhan as the IGP without following minimum conditions of appointment process. The Supreme Court supported the voices of the opposition.

The violence of the last five years in the name of Maoists people's movement was a result of political suppression. It was enhanced by the discriminatory traditions prevalent in the society. It was made explosive by political ideology. People in the crossfire of violence of both the Maoists and the Government wants to live in peace. The government that is responsible for removing barriers to people's normal lifestyles, had in the name of removing those barriers involved itself in violation of basic human rights. The government was largely unable to build moral pressure for peace through its political behavior making conflict resolution difficult. Conflict resolution depends upon the ability of government to build moral pressure.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2006

After February 1, 2005, Nepal become a country without democracy that pushed the democracy and human rights situation to a crisis. Following a royal coup, the situation had become different despite assuring words of the king. The political and constitutional crisis had deepened after the king formed a government with him as the chair that was followed by violations of political and civil rights, attacks on democratic and human rights organisations and disregard of the judiciary. Civil society, political parties and professional organizations were protesting the royal move. Even though there was a unilateral ceasefire in the conflict, the Maoist conflict continued. The events led to polarization of the political parties and the Maoists who reached agreement on the need for holding a constituent assembly election and establishing “full” democracy in the country. The political parties were confident in their ability to bring the Maoists to mainstream politics and the Maoist had also expressed greater flexibility towards the same. It was likely that the political parties and Maoists would prepare a common task list the longer the absolute rule continued.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2007

The year 2006 will remain noteworthy in Nepal’s political history for the steps taken towards taking the peace process forward. In late 2005, the seven political parties and the Maoists reached an agreement – known as the 12 point agreement – for building sustainable peace. The authoritarian rule of the king ended within five months of the pact and the people experienced peace for the first time after a decade of the violent conflict. The Maoists and the seven parties signed more agreements but the year had come to an end before the implementation began. The parliament was reinstated as part of the process after which the house made some far-reaching commitments. The seven parties stopped their protests after the end of royal rule but the Maoists said they would continue their protests because it was betrayal on the part of the seven parties. This led to fears about continued violence and instability. It was only after the restored parliament’s declaration to hold a constituent assembly election did the peace process move forward.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2008

Impunity remained prevalent in the country as evidenced by delays on the proposed bill on Truth and Reconciliation Commission and the inability of parliament to approve the statute of the International Criminal Court even after two years of its reinstatement. The inability of the government to address issues of disappearance, the conflict affected and those displaced also dampened the public expectations, which had also become a concern of the international community – particularly the inability of leaders to deliver to their commitments and abide by their agreements. It has been the practice of countries emerging from armed conflicts to form commissions for transitional justice and truth and reconciliation and deliver justice for the victims and make accountable to those involved in major violations of human rights. Furthermore, truth and reconciliation process was expected as a fundamental step to ensure social harmony. There were discussions throughout 2007 on the transitional justice process, particularly on the possibility of history repeating itself if human rights violators were not brought to justice.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2009

The regulations of the Constitution Assembly were approved at the end of 2008. But, the constitution making remained very basic and it took eight months before the different committees of the Assembly were formed. The parties were unable to reach agreement on who would head the committees -- One Constitution committee, 10 subject committees, three procedural committees, and 10 committees of the regular parliament. The chairs of the committees were not elected at the end of the year and the soured relations between the Maoists and the Nepali Congress party also remained not unsettled. The relations of the ruling Maoist party with its coalition partner the CPN UML was also not ideal. Throughout the year there were fears that the cooperation exhibited by the political parties during the popular movement would not remain between them during constitution making.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2010

The political parties that had made commitments towards human rights of marginalized people could have agreed on accepting the Human Development Index for identifying such groups. They could have accepted the principle of progressive acquisition. They could have approved the statute of the International Criminal Court and could have also enacted Nepal's own criminal code, which did not happen while the culture of impunity rooted deeper in Nepali politics. Maoists took responsibility for the murders of Ram Hari Shrestha and journalist Birendra Sah and promoted the individuals involved in the killings. The government also flouted the Court's order to arrest and present the army officer allegedly involved in the torture and death of Maina Sunwar. Most of the cases withdrawn when the Maoists headed government were related to serious conflict-related crimes. Both local and international human rights organizations protested against the decisions but the government did not budge from its decision.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2011

Forced disappearances of people that had begun during Panchayat period increased during the armed conflict and has continued by different groups and political parties. The political leaders have continued making commitments to right the wrong but lack of similar commitment at the level of political institutions has overshadowed the issue investigating forced disappearances. Various agreements between the Maoist Party and the Government including the seven-point agreement, the Interim Constitution have included the subject of forced disappeared persons as one of serious concern of conflict era human rights violation. The Comprehensive Peace Accord (CPA) said that whereabouts of those forcefully disappeared would be ascertained and made public within 60 days. But, even after four years of the CPA, both Government and Maoists have remained silent on the matter. Instead, they have continued to blame each other and largely sidelined the issue for political expediency. The situation of disappeared persons remains a major concern in comparison to other human rights violations. The Government and the political parties have largely ignored the numerous pleas of families of those disappeared to put the issue at rest.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2012

The political parties failed to continue on the path of forming governments by consensus and concluding the peace process that was the spirit of both the CPA and the Interim Constitution. The government led by Madhav Kumar Nepal that had remained as caretaker for about seven months had made some attempts but could not conclude the peace process. The governments led by both Jhala Nath Khanal and Dr. Babu Ram Bhattarai also failed to uphold the spirit of the CPA discussed above regarding the peace process. Besides, the internal conflicts within major political parties were also obstacles to the peace process. Both Khanal and Dr. Bhattarai had become prime ministers with agreements with the Maoist and the Madhesi parties, respectively. Khanal made an agreement for leading the government in turns with the Unified Maoists but CPN UML did not participate in the Maoist-led government. Nepali Congress, the second largest party, did not participate in both governments and Madhesi parties were included by almost all governments.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2013

The CPA made the peace process outlined in the 12-point agreement broader. But, even though both the CPA and the Interim Constitution had outlined the path towards peace building there was little progress even after six years of the accord. There were no initiatives to set up Truth and Reconciliation Commission and Commission of Investigation of Forced Disappeared Persons agreed in the CPA and instead the parties resorted to blaming each other for the work not done. This led to concerns of the United Nations as well as countries of the European Union that questioned the willpower of the governments and political parties to put the matter at rest. The purpose of these commission was to investigate human rights violations and persons involved in gross violations and bring those involved to justice and end impunity; and to provide relief and to create an environment of reconciliation between victim and accused to prevent similar occurrences in the future. Even though the commissions were supposed to deliver ering justice to the victims of human rights violations and facilitate the establishment of sustainable peace, the tasks remained largely unfulfilled.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2014

The confusing period that had prevailed in the previous years ended and the election of a second Constitution Assembly provided a new direction to the country. This led to hopes of eventually having a government of the elected representatives and the completion of the peace process among the people, ending the uncertainty that had remained for seven years. With completion of the processes of disarming and reintegrating Maoists forces also assured the likelihood of peace. The election just concluded had also been fairer than previous ones and had also had sound participation of the people.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2015

However, because of infringements into due processes and methods by senior party leaders, both the Constituent Assembly and parliament remained largely ineffective. Topics raised in parliament were rarely addressed even though there the Assembly had no option but to issue a new timetable and promulgate a new constitution. There was also the need of parliament to enact important bills on human rights in compliance with international standards.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2016

Year 2015 has become the most important year following the promulgation of the Constitution by the elected representatives. That earned Nepal the identity of being the 43rd country to promulgate a Constitution through a Constitutional Assembly. The Constitution is not only the main law but something that has given Nepalis a respite from the 10-year transition and has also taken the country to the most important phase of the peace process. The Constitution has raised hopes of a country that had remained mired in instability for over two decades. The bill of the Constitution submitted by the drafting committee was debated in the sessions held from August 27 to 30. The debates on the articles with amendments were held between September 8 to 13 and on the amended versions from the September 14 to 16 and was approved by an overwhelming majority (507 members or 89.79% of the Assembly) and promulgated on 15 September. Among representatives participating in the final vote included 120 from indigenous communities, 67 Mahesi, 21 Tharu, and 14 Muslim. Nepal's constitutional history began in 1947 and this was the seventh constitution of the country but the first made by elected representatives.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2017

As per the provision of new Constitution, the government headed by K.P Sharma Oli had formed the local level restructuring committee. The committee submitted its report to the government recommending the formation of 719 local governments. The Constitution's Article 56 (1) has provisioned a three-spheres of governance structure federal, provincial, and local. Article 56 (4) and (5) provide for having rural municipality and municipalities and District Coordination Committees. The territories of these bodies and special, protected, or autonomous regions, under Article 295 (4), had to be done within six months of the promulgation of the Constitution. The Commission had submitted its report based on the provision which was opposed by Madhes (plains) based parties that had demanded the dissolution of the commission and rejection of the report. The views of the Nepali Congress and the Maoist Centre also differed. Meantime the Madhesi parties denounced the federalization approach and even threatened to reject the Constitution. They had also prevented the Commission from collecting suggestions on the approach in all eight plains-based districts. Further, even prime minister Puspa Kamal Dahal (Maoist) had delayed the acceptance of the report and eventually agreed to be present at a function where the report was presented to the Minister of Local Level Development.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2018

All three spheres elections of local, provincial, and federal representatives were held in accordance with the Constitution within a year. The elections were held smoothly, something that had not been expected in the country and by international observers. The completion of three tiers of elections in a peaceful manner was a remarkable political achievement. The Constituent Assembly elected under provisions of the Interim Constitution where Nepal had adopted an inclusive election approach had returned over 30 political parties in the Assembly, which commentators had blamed as reason for political instability. The number of elected National parties to parliament decreased in the 2017/18 elections. The communist alliance that emerged with a near to 2/3 rd majority in the election had promised political stability and prosperity. The discussions on how both political stability and prosperity can result remained to be discussed but had given people hope that there would be political stability.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2019

The country had completed all three elections and was headed towards stability. Eighteen laws for the implementation of fundamental rights have been enacted and the different Commissions as provisioned by the Constitution were in the process of formation. Human rights are given prioritized in the Constitution and laws taking into accounts requirements of various international standards. Issues of human rights have been incorporated in all service trainings provided by Nepal Police and the Nepal Army has been providing training to its staff on both international humanitarian laws and human rights. However, the enactment of human rights-compliant local level laws for ending impunity and instituting rule of law remain works in progress. Human rights in Nepal can be freed from influences by ensuring legislation in accordance with the constitution, provided there is effective implementation.

Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2020

Transitional justice has remained confined to economic assistance provided to the victims, which successive governments have tended to equate with justice and reparation. It has also become apparent the the government is not serious about bringing those accused of gross human rights violations to justice, reparations and supporting livelihoods of those affected by the conflict. The government seems to have taken these actions as unnecessary pressure. The government has included these actions in the National Human Rights Action Plan but has largely undermined the participation and recommendations of stakeholders in the drafting of approaches, plans and policies for the purpose. Both the conflicting parties – now parts of the state – have continued to ignore the aim of transitional justice which is to prepare ground for establishing lasting peace. One reason for this is because both sides in conflict remain powerful and also are located in powerful state positions. The concerns of the victims remain with both the Nepal Army and Maoists now as parts of the state. They seem oblivious that the splinter group of the Maoist party could take advantage of the situation. The Maoist leader Prachanda has publicly announced that they were responsible for killing 5000 people in the armed conflict, indicating that the successive governments and the security forces were responsible for the remaining others who were killed in the decade long insurgency. This could be a reason for major political parties to remain disinterested in addressing the issues and concluding the transitional justice process.

Judiciary

Background

The Constitution of Nepal ensured the principle of justice which shall be exercised by courts and other judicial bodies in accordance with the Constitution, other laws and the recognized principles of justice and can be exercised through the Supreme Court, High Court and District Courts.¹ In addition, there is a provision of local judicial committees and other units to assist the the justice process and resolve the disputes at local level.² The judicial committees are formed under the chairpersonship of deputy chief of municipality or vice chairperson of the rural municipality.

The Constitution has designated the Supreme Court as the Court of Record, and all other Courts and judicial institutions function under the Supreme Court. This Court shall have the final authority for interpreting the Constitution and laws.³ Each province has a High Court⁴ and the statute provide for a District Court in every district.⁵ In addition to the Courts referred in Article 130, the law may establish and constitute other specialized Courts, judicial institutions or tribunals, hearing cases of special types and nature.⁶

The Constitution has given the Supreme Court extraordinary jurisdiction for interpreting the law and the Statute itself. Article 133 (2) states that the “Supreme Court shall, for the enforcement of the fundamental rights conferred by this Constitution, for the enforcement of any other legal right for which no other remedy has been provided or for which the remedy even though provided appears to be inadequate or ineffective, or for the settlement of any constitutional or legal question involved in any dispute of public interest or concern, have the extraordinary power to issue necessary and appropriate orders to enforce such rights or settle the dispute”.⁷ For this the Court may issue appropriate orders and writs including the writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, certiorari, prohibition and quowarranto for imparting full justice and providing the appropriate remedy.⁸

The Constitution has given the High Courts jurisdiction to adjudicate legal questions on matters of public rights, including concern over the exercise of the fundamental rights. The High Courts also issues appropriate orders and writs including the writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, certiorari, prohibition and quo warranto.⁹ However, the High Courts are barred from interfering with the internal task and the proceedings and decisions of the Provincial Assembly concerning violation of its privileges and any penalties imposed thereof.¹⁰ The High Court can also issue orders in the name of government, office bearers, institutions and individuals within the provincial jurisdictions for the enforcement of the fundamental rights conferred by the Constitution, for the enforcement of any other legal right for which no other remedy has been provided or for which the remedy even though provided appears to be inadequate or ineffective, or for the settlement of any legal question involved in any dispute of public interest or concern.¹¹ Thus, High Court is given the right to hear the issues of public concern including law enforcement.

The District Court has the authority to hear appeals on all federal law enforcement, decision made by quasi-judicial bodies and decisions made by local judicial bodies constituted in accordance with provincial law. The District Court has jurisdiction to hear original cases and execute all cases within its jurisdiction, hear petitions of habeas corpus, prohibitory order and other petitions according to the law, hear appeal over the decisions taken by the quasi-judicial bodies, hear appeal over the decision of the local level judicial institutions established according to the law of the province and initiate action and punish in contempt of Court against those obstructing its or its subordinate Courts acts of judicial execution or not abiding by the order or verdict, unless otherwise provided by the law.¹² The jurisdiction of the District Court has been expanded compared to the past.

This article attempts to discuss the decisions, orders and rulings made by the Courts and judicial bodies in 2020, based on the Constitution, international law, prevailing laws and accepted principles of law.

Limitation in Reference Materials

The COVID-19 pandemic affected INSEC's efforts to access reference materials for analysis. The previous editions of Nepal Human Rights Year Book used information from the Nepal Kanun Patrika published by the Supreme Court as reference material. This year the Nepal Kanun Patrika was not published regularly and the judgments and decisions available up to June 2020 were on litigations of the previous year and did not serve the purpose of this article. Therefore, the analysis this year is based on important decisions of the Supreme Court, e-copies of verdicts, reports of litigations in national daily newspapers, the Supreme Court's website, INSEC Online, and other publications.

Disrupted Judicial Procedures

The COVID-19 pandemic and associated lockdowns began in Nepal early in the year. Efforts to tackle pandemic had overshadowed all kinds of human rights issues temporarily, even though a person has certain rights that are enforceable even in the times of crisis. These include rights related to freedom, equality, and dignity that are guaranteed by both international human rights law, the Constitution and laws of Nepal.

The Supreme Court issued various directives and rulings to government on the fundamental rights enshrined in the Constitution such as the right to health, the right to food, and the right to freedom of movement. Although the regular issues of the Court's daily list had to be taken up, the Court did hold regular hearings on writs of habeas corpus, the Petition of the juvenile rehabilitation centre and arrest warrant permit and support.

The Government of Nepal declared a nationwide lockdown from March 24 to July 22, 2020 to control the spread of COVID-19 infections. As the number of people affected by COVID-19 increased, even the district administrative bodies issued local prohibitory orders in Kathmandu Valley and other districts from August 19 to September 16, 2020. This affected the proceedings of Courts across the country, including that of the Supreme Court, and fewer cases were adjudicated compared to previous years.

Notices Issued by the Supreme Court during the Pandemic

The Supreme Court had issued an information on various judicial proceedings and health standards during the pandemic and that played a vital role in informing the citizens about the proceeding, the necessary procedure related to cases and the health standards to be followed at the court. A meeting of all justices on March 25, 2020, chaired by the Chief Justice, decided to postpone all the cases except habeas corpus the Petition of the juvenile rehabilitation centre and arrest warrant permit and support. To ease the process, in addition to the decision made by the meeting of March 25, the notice of the Supreme Court issued on June 3, 2020 mentioned the Court would begin hearing writ petitions filed before and during the period of lockdown in the presence of lawyers.

Another notice issued on July 1, 2020 said that the writ petitions to be filed in the Constitutional Court and cases would be registered, processed and heard, while another one of July 28 withdrew the flexibility allowed due to the increasing spread of COVID-19, and infections of Supreme Court staff. The Court restarted operations after the government announced the end of the lockdown. Its notice said that entry at the Courts would be permitted while health and safety precautions would be followed. It also set the time on limitation for filing petitions as 30 days, in addition to the travel time.

Restraining orders during the lockdown

Representative cases heard by the Supreme Court during the 120-days lockdown and the 29 days of prohibitory order imposed in the Kathmandu Valley are discussed below.

Decision to hear only urgent cases

The nationwide lockdown limited the function of Courts across the country. A plenary meeting chaired by Chief Justice Cholendra Shamsher J.B. Rana on March 25 decided to stop the work of recording statements and registration of charges, etc while deciding to accept habeas corpus Petition of the juvenile rehabilitation centre and arrest warrant permit and support. The meeting also decided to continue hearing of pandemic-related petitions of serious nature.¹³

Right to food for vulnerable people

The Supreme Court issued an order March 30, 2020 ordering government to provide relief and support by identifying the extremely poor daily wage earners during the pandemic. The order was issued by the single bench of Justice Bishowambhar Shrestha and asked the federal, provincial and local governments to coordinate their efforts to distribute food and carry out relief programs.¹⁴

Order to use private hospital for treatment

On March 31, 2020 the Supreme Court issued an interim order on involving private health institutions in the treatment of corona virus. A single bench of Justice Manoj Kumar Sharma ruled that the private health institution should not refrain from treating people with COVID-19 infections under any pretext. The order called for the provision of personal safety equipment to all health workers, including physicians involved in the treatment, ensuring the availability of beds, ICU rooms, ventilators and other necessary equipment for the treatment of COVID-positive cases.¹⁵ freely from one place to another.¹⁶ The Supreme Court issued an interim order to the government to allow Nepali resident in India for study, employment and treatment to enter the country in a systematic manner with quarantine restrictions. The single bench of Justice Sapana Malla Pradhan had issued the order to assist citizens stranded on the border to enter the country, while enforcing global standards of infection control in the process. The Court also pointed out that although it is the right of citizens to return their home, since this issue was connected with the health and safety of many people the return should be managed in a balanced manner.¹⁷ The writ had been filed by advocate Som Prasad Luitel.

Order to rescue stranded Citizen

In another judgement, on April 17, 2020, the bench of judges Ananda Mohan Bhattarai and Sapana Pradhan Malla ordered the government to support people returning home on foot from Kathmandu Valley to their destinations following health and safety measures. The writ had been filed by senior advocate Prakash Mani Sharma asking the Court to order government to take all the necessary measures for the safety including check-up, and arranging the vehicles free of cost for transporting people to their destinations.

Order Order not to inhumane the citizens

Advocate Shailendra Prasad Harijan and others had filed a writ alleging that the police of misreating people citizens returning from Kathmandu and other urban areas during the lockdown. The joint bench of Justices Deepak Kumar

Karki and Ishwar Prasad Khatriwada issued a decision on April 23, 2020 stating that it is necessary to protect the life, personal dignity and honor of the people even during a lockdown and ordered State officials in any role to ensure that any person was not treated inhumanely as that would be against the law.¹⁸

Decided not to count the duration of lockdown

For the first time in the history of Nepal, full bench of 19 judges ruled that the all cases disrupted would be considering the period of the lockdown as “zero-hour”. The order stipulated an additional 30 days from end of the lockdown can be provided as additional time for case registration. The Supreme Court ruled that the period from March 28 to the date of opening of lockdown, when it had stopped providing regular services as the null or zero hour for the purpose of judicial proceedings.¹⁹

Free health care

On October 1, 2020 the Supreme Court ordered the government to make the corona virus test and treatment free of cost for all citizens. A joint bench of Justices Ananda Mohan Bhattarai and Tanka Bahadur Moktan issued the order to the Ministry of Health and Population. The decision came after government hospitals began charging a fee for treatment and required to make advance deposits to cover the costs. The government sought a review of the Court order on October 1, which the Court rejected on November 5. “The government seems to be headed towards curtailing citizens’ right to free basic health care,” the bench of justices Harikrishna Karki, Sapana Pradhan

Malla and Purushottam Bhandari ruled and said there was no need to review the Supreme Court's earlier decision and ordered the government not to be swayed. This order obligated the government to provide free treatment to COVID-19 patients.²⁰

Habeas Corpus Orders

The law requires anyone arrested to be produced before a judicial authority within a period of 24 hours after arrest, excluding the time necessary for the journey from the time and place of arrest to such an authority. It also bars detention of such a detainee beyond 24 hours except on the order of such authority.²¹ In order to enforce this right, on March 25, the court decided to hear the habeas corpus petitions and petitions to for custody of the children in the correctional institutions even during the lockdown. Accordingly, writs of habeas corpus were heard regularly all the courts during the lockdown.

A total of 1 hundred15 writ petitions were heard at the Supreme Court during the lockdown, and 31 petitions during the period of the restraining order. In a writ of habeas corpus, the Supreme Court ordered the release of the petitioner who had been on charges of violating public peace without adequate grounds and reason but based on personal beliefs. The order was issued on July 8, 2020.²² Similarly, the Supreme Court also ordered the release of a petitioner held in illegal detention after release on bail for transferring the suspect to another district, as there was no reason continuously extending the detention, June 22, 2020.²³

Facilities for inmates and detainees

The Supreme Court issued an order instructing the Government to uphold the provisions in the Aecnd Amendment to the Prisons Act 1963 that allows inmates who have completed three years in prison to be eligible for community service at the order of the designated authority.²⁴ Another provision allows the designated authority to allow an inmate who has served at least one-third of his/her sentence for sentences of over three years to remain in an open prison.²⁵ The Supreme Court issued an order instructing the government to facilitate the process to enable inmates to exercise the provisions in the law. The order was issued on April 29 by a bench of Justices Kumar Regmi and Hari Phuyal, which they said would also help control increasing corona virus infections at the prisons.

No Amnesty for Conflict-era Incidents²⁶

On April 26, 2020 the Supreme Court on April 26, 2020 rejected the request of the Government of Nepal for a review of the Supreme Court's order for pardon for serious crimes committed during the conflict. The bench of Justices Kalyan Shrestha, Baidyanath Upadhyaya and Cholendra Shamsher J. B. Rana had on February 26, 2015 decided that reconciliation should not be forced on victims in conflict-era cases, reconciliation should not be done to hurt the self-esteem of victims and reconciliation should not be used as a means to grant amnesty to serious human rights violations. The Sushil Koirala led government had filed a review petition at the Supreme Court on July 27, 2015 demanding reversal of the order. This order has become a milestone in the transitional justice process of Nepal. The government's petition was rejected by a bench of Justices Deepak Kumar Karki, Mira Khadka, Bishwambhar Prasad Shrestha, Ishwar Prasad Khatiwada and Dr. Ananda Mohan Bhattarai. The Supreme Court has ordered the government to submit an inquiry into the murder of Arjun Lama of Kavre. After a hearing the writ petition against Speaker Agni Prasad Sapkota, on February 7, 2016 the Court directed the government to provide information on the status of implementation of its previous Court order on the case and the status of the investigation within 30 days. However, the case has not been followed up by the Court since.

National Women Commission

The constitution of Nepal provides for a National Women Commission with a chairperson and four members.²⁷ The term of office of the chairperson and members of the National Commission for Women is six years.²⁸ The Supreme Court issued a cause order to the government asking why no officials had been appointed to the Commission, even after over four years after the terms of the incumbents had ended. Hearing the writ petition filed by senior advocate Mira Dhungana and others against the Constitutional Council on December 30, 2019, the Court issued the show cause order on January 28, 2019.²⁹

Order against Arbitrary Arrests

The Constitution protects all citizens from arbitrary arrest, detention or exile.³⁰ It requires any one arrested to be produced before a judicial authority within 24 of arrest, excluding the time necessary for the journey from the time and place of arrest to such authority. The law forbids detention of the arrested person in custody beyond the said period except on the order of a judicial authority.³¹ Based on this provision, on December 29 the Supreme Court ordered the government to desist from arresting the leaders and cadres of the banned Communist Party of Nepal (CPN) led by Netra Bikram Chand 'Biplav' on false charges, without any reason.

A bench of Supreme Court Justices Tej Bahadur KC and Ishwar Khatiwada had Jung Bahadur Bhandari, in-charge of Lamjung district and two other detainees following habeas corpus writs and ordered the Home Administration not to re-arrest them on false charges. Police had arrested CPN (Maoist) Lamjung in-charge Bhandari, District Secretary Bil Bahadur Gurung and district committee member Rabindra Nakhola from Tanahun on December 16. After a habeas corpus writ, the Supreme Court had ordered the release of the detainees on December 27 and had also warned to the Secretary of Home Affairs and the Chief of Police of sanctions if those released were rearrested.³²

Right to Freedom

Hearing a writ petition filed under the Right to Freedom, the Supreme Court issued an order to the government on July 10 asking it not to restrict the right of citizens to move inside or outside the country. A joint bench of Justices Ananda Mohan Bhattarai and Kumar Regmi said that in the full text of the verdict in the case of Lenin Bista, a former child soldier of the then rebel CPN (Maoist).³³

Writ on the Dissolution of the House of Representatives

There is a provision for a constitutional bench at the Supreme Court for interpreting the Constitution and resolve disputes. Such a bench has the Chief Justice and other four judges appointed by the Chief Justice on the recommendation of the Chief Justice and the Judicial Council.³⁴ A number of writs were filed at the Supreme Court following the decision of Prime Minister KP Sharma Oli to dissolve the House of Representatives and seek a new mandate on December 20. The petitions challenging the dissolution of the House of Representatives was sent to the Constitutional Court by the Chief Justice Cholendra Shamsher Rana on December 22.

Participation of Dalit

The Constitution guarantees participation of Dalits in all state bodies on the basis of the principle of proportional inclusion. It has stated that special arrangements will be made as per the law for the empowerment, representation and participation of the Dalit community in other sectors of employment including public service.³⁵ The guiding principles of the Constitution, envision a welfare state established by maintaining a just system in all spheres of national life through proportional inclusion, participation and social justice.

For social justice, there are provisions to ensure participation of socially marginalized groups, including women, Dalits, Adivasis, Janajatis, Madhesis, Tharus, minorities, persons with disabilities, marginalized Muslims, backward classes, gender and sexual minorities, youth, farmers, workers, oppressed or backward areas' citizens and economically disadvantaged Khas Arya.³⁶ A writ petition based on this was filed by advocate Bhakta Bahadur Bishwakarma against the decision of April 2, 2018 to appoint advocates at the Supreme Court and High Courts but was rejected by the Supreme Court on February 23, 2020.³⁷

Judiciary Reform Plan

The Supreme Court has set up various mechanisms to ensure the right to justice. Similarly, periodical plans, various strategic policies and programs have also been formulated.

Access to Justice Commission

Access to justice is the condition in which justice can be sought and obtained through appropriate bodies. The the Access to Justice Commission has been formed with the objective of ensuring easy access to justice, especially for children, women, Adivasi/Janajati, senior citizens, person with disability and those who are unable to seek justice due to economic and social reasons.³⁸ The Commission issued its annual action plan 2019/20 to ensure easy access to justice for the citizens, including the communities deprived from various opportunities and rights.³⁹ Among others, the plan aims to study the challenges of access to justice for the children at correctional institutions, the issue of access to justice for citizens in the correctional institution, coordination and facilitation to institutionalize voluntary legal services, among others.⁴⁰

Implementation of Court decisions

The implementation of Court verdicts has remained very weak, and the Supreme Court has put special emphasis the implementation of the judgments in its Second Five Year Strategic Plan.⁴¹ It also established the Judgment Implementation Directorate at the Supreme Court on June 10, 2009. However, as the rate of adjudication of outstanding cases in this yearbook show, there is still much room for improvement.

The Fourth Five-Year Plan of the judiciary

The Fourth Five-Year Strategic Plan of the Judiciary, has the slogan: “Independence of the Judiciary: Judicial Governance is Our Commitment”. The plan will be implemented from 2019/20 to 2023/24. The year 2020 was the first year of the Fourth Five-Year Plan. The plan has 23 strategic objectives for achieving five goals.⁴² A strategy has been prepared to expedite the case resolution and make the implementation of the Court decisions effective in order to ensure speedy delivery of quality justice.⁴³

Conclusions

1. The lockdown had a direct impact on the lives of the people and disrupted services to all organs of the state. The judiciary was also affected and many human rights issues of citizens remained overshadowed. The Supreme Court had made special efforts to ensure that the Courts remained operational to hear writs on habeas corpus and from juvenile correctional institutions, and requests for arrest warrants.

2. The Supreme Court issued various directives and rulings on the right to health, the right to food, and the right to enter one’s own country, which were major challenges during the COVID-19 lockdowns. It also ruled that the duration of the lockdown should not be counted in the statute of limitations and issued an order to provide additional time for registration of cases and Court dates by 30 days from the end of lockdown.
3. INSEC’s yearbooks have highlighted the State’s insensitivity to transitional justice since 2007. This year, the Supreme Court quashed the government’s petition seeking a review on an earlier judgement where the Court had said those guilty of serious human rights violations during the conflict could not be provided amnesty and pardon.
4. After Prime Minister KP Sharma Oli recommended the dissolution of the House of Representatives on December 22, which was approved by the President at the same day. The Constitutional Bench headed by the Chief Justice began hearing all the petitions challenging the dissolution.

Chapter 2

2.2 State and Human Rights

Executive

All the organs of the state have an important role towards respecting, protecting, promoting, and abiding to the fundamental principles of human rights, but the executive branch has a greater role. The implementation of existing laws is used as a general indicator to determine the human rights situation of the country. The Executive is also responsible for representing the country's interests at the United Nations, ratifying regional or international treaties and conventions, sending periodic reports to the United Nations, and responding or acting upon suggestions made by the treaty bodies and the Human Rights Council. The Executive's role also includes presenting legislation based on international treaties in Parliament, drafting legislations or policies in relation to human rights, presenting the annual fiscal budget, and appointing key individuals to constitutional bodies, including human rights related national institutions.

The Constitution of Nepal has distributed executive authority across all three tiers of government: local, province, and federal, which gives all three tiers space to work towards the protection and preservation of human rights. In 2020, the government began implementing the 5th National Human Rights Action Plan. This year the government appointed commissions at the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC), and the Commission of Investigation on Enforced Disappeared Persons (CIEDP). The government also reported Nepal's report for the Universal Periodic Review at the Human Rights Council. The government issued directives for engaging inmates in labor and on open prisons and made reforms on the allowances provided to those in prison for improving their situation. Some notable actions of the Executive this year were reestablishing and repairing health posts damaged by the 2015 earthquake, laying the cornerstones of one hospital in all 753 local level governments, making progress in the reconstruction of educational institutions and private residences now in the final stages, building and allocating homes to citizens under the Janata Aawash program, and making progress towards the replacement of all Tuins (wire river crossing arrangements) in the country. The government reunited about 1,200 street children with their families, and rehabilitated them. It also initiated commendable activities in the protection of human rights of senior citizens, women victims of sexual violence, victims of acid attacks, airlifting of pregnant women to hospitals, among others. However, the regulations for the implementation of laws on fundamental rights were not prepared. The government's disregard of Supreme Court directives, demands of victims and human rights organizations, in the appointments to the TRC and CIEDP reflected the governments disregard for transitional justice and reparation.

The lockdown imposed at the beginning of the year to contain the coronavirus pandemic affected the lives of citizens for six months. This infringed on several basic civil liberties such as the right to health, right to employment, and right to travel, right to operate businesses, right to education, the consumer rights, and the right to observe festivals.

(A) COVID-19 and Human Rights

The coronavirus had a significant impact on the economic, educational, and cultural rights of civilians throughout the year. By the end of 2020, Nepal had 260,593 COVID-19 positive cases and 1,856 deaths. The government's inability to guarantee sufficient testing and treatment to people with COVID-19 infections, low access of citizens to access healthcare, inability of the government to make adequate resources available for equipment necessary for treatment at health institutions, and questions of quality and reliability of equipment had raised questions of credibility and resulted in criticism of the Executive. The government attempted to clarify its actions but fell far short of being able to stop the public criticism. The government established a “High Level Coordination Committee for the Prevention and Control of COVID-19” to coordinate the response to the pandemic. It also committed to providing those with infections necessary relief measures by approving an action plan for implementing cabinet decisions, 2019 and providing relief and support to COVID-19 affected areas based on the action plan. It also issued an interim directive to improve the status of healthcare centers around the country for delivering quality healthcare access to civilians for COVID-19 and other health problems. However, there still were grievances about unequal monitoring of all health care institutions unequal treatment of the health institutions.

The government had approved and implemented an order for providing risk allowance for the health workers involved in the treatment and care of COVID-19 infected persons but there were media reports suggesting that the order had not fully been implemented.¹ There were also cuts in both the jobs and compensation of journalists this year². In the absence of government assistance it had become difficult for media to stay operational during the pandemic. In the Karnali Province alone, over five dozen news outlets were forced to shut down, leaving 80 journalists and 60 other employees at media companies without jobs. About a dozen news outlets there had not resumed services even after the end of the lockdown.³

(B) The Rights to a Dignified Life

There were reports about violations of the right of citizens to dignified lives stemming from human rights violations. Many people lost their lives in floods, road accidents, rape, murder, and during pregnancy.⁴ Sixty-eight pregnant women and new mothers died due to the inability to reach health institutions during the lockdown. The young environmental activist was murdered and another youth was killed in police shooting, still another teacher was killed in Morang District by cadres of the banned Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist). Cases of murder of women by family members or other groups were reported this year as well⁵. This year three hundred people lost their lives in natural disasters. There was also no decrease in the number of people being killed in traffic accidents.

(C) Child Rights

Although there was no progress in formulating regulations fundamental rights was made, there was progress towards the implementation of the Children’s Act, 2019. This year the government attempted to amend the regulations for implementation of the Children’s Act (2051) to provide it the necessary framework, committee formation, and appointments.⁶

The Ministry of Women, Children, and Social Welfare, with the National Child Rights Council (NCRC) have made efforts towards the protection of child rights. The government continued its “No child should or need to be on the street” campaign this year. The campaign rehabilitated or reunited 574 children with their families in 2020. Similarly, the search coordination center for children, was able to rescue, and rehabilitate or reunite 2,210 out of 2,729 children reported missing with their families.⁷ Following monitoring, the government issued warnings to orphanages that had not met the government's standards and rescued 55 children and reunited 52 of the children with their families. Even though disrupted for three during the lockdown immunization and nutrition programs were gradually continued.

No major efforts were taken towards improving the situation child laborers and child labor. There were reports of children being put to work on difficult tasks on low wages and without insurance, as in previous years, as well as of child-marriage and forced marriages. Although 10,499 children victims of the conflict received state assistance, there still are a large number of children from marginalized families that have received no support whatsoever.⁸

The lockdown imposed from March 24 caused educational institutions to remain shut for about 10 months. Although the government claimed to continued education through remote or online learning, it was not effective. The government issued a directive to ease teaching-learning of students in 2020⁹. Even though there seems to be an increase in concern for child rights, there is still need for further attention to ensure adequate resources, and to tackle issues such as child abuse, rape, child sexual violence, misbehavior, and kidnapping, children's homes, and for the rescue and rehabilitation of street children.

(D) Women's Rights

The Ministry of Women, Children, and Social Welfare, National Women Commission, the Women, Children, and Senior Citizens Directorate at the Nepal Police, carried out various activities for protecting and promoting women's rights. The National Women Commission, a constitutional body, remained without office bearers for a long period of time, until the Constitutional Council made the appointments. INSEC has documented violence against women during the lockdown. The government had made commitments to end all forms of violence against women in 2020 on different national and international platforms. But there were reports of dowry, forced marriages, child marriages, allegations of witchcraft, and acid attacks during the year¹⁰. There were efforts of local governments and the police to dismantle Chhau-Goths (menstrual huts) in the Sudarpaschim Province that led to the dismantling of 2,445 such structures¹¹. However, it is impossible to end the long history of Chhaupadi in the region by merely dismantling the structures, and there were reports of new Chhau-Goths being built to replace those that had been pulled down.

The Government implemented the "President Women Empowerment Project Directive 2076" in 22 districts that were ranked low on the status of women rights.¹² Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, a large number of women were denied care during pregnancy and childbirth, leading to 38 deaths of pregnant women and new mothers, as reported by the National Human Rights Commission's (NHRC).¹³

(E) Rights of Senior Citizens

Although the rights of the senior citizens have been protected by the Constitution and other laws, the legal instruments remain to be fully implemented in practice. The government has welfare programs for senior citizens such as free healthcare for certain conditions, health insurance, and discounted rates for public transport. However, the implementation aspects of these schemes remain poor.

(F) Rights of the Disabled

People with disabilities make up about two percent of Nepal's population. Even though the Constitution, different laws and international instruments make it the responsibility of the state to protect the rights of differently-abled people, there has been no noticeable change in their situation. The government continued previous programs such as reservations in the national civil service, discounts on import duty, and quotas in the educational system this year as well.

(G) Rights against Discrimination

Although the Constitution has outlawed caste-based discrimination, it is still prevalent in society. In 2020, the government issued an ordinance changing membership of the Constitutional Council and appointed office bearers to various constitutional bodies, including the National Dalit Commission. However, both the changes in the Constitutional Council and the appointments became controversial.

The Dalit community still suffers from discrimination in employment, economic opportunities, and inclusion. Most cases of discrimination rarely reach the police and even when they do, they are resolved locally outside the judicial process. On May 23, 21-years-old Nawaraj B.K., from Jajarkot District, Bheri Municipality-4 and 17 others were attacked and beaten by locals at Soti, Chaurjahari Municipality-8 when they had travelled there for accompanying, a 17-year-old bride from the town. The Dalits were chased to the banks of the Bheri River and attacked leading to the deaths of Nawaraj B.K., Tikaram Nepali (20, Rukum District, Chaurjahari Municipality-1), Sanju B.K. (21, Jajarkot District, Bheri Municipality-4), Govinda Shahi (17), Ganesh B.M. (19), and Lokendra Sunar, 19. Their bodies were recovered from the river on different dates. Further, several others – Madan Shahi 19, Sudip Khadka (19), Lalbahadur Khadka (17), Saroj Bhandel (17), Indrajung Shah (18), Dilli Sunar (21), Bibhag Pun (18), Govinda BK (15), Bhola BK (17), Saroj Khadka (17), Manish Karki 18, and Govinda Sunar, 17, – were injured in the clash.¹⁴

This incident provides critical insights on the prevalence of caste-based discrimination and untouchability in Nepal. Non-Dalits who marry into a Dalit family are reported to be boycotted during social or cultural gatherings and festivals. Often, they are expelled from their homes and villages, forcefully separated after the wedding, and even physically assaulted. Such incidents occur routinely and continue to handle informally and locally, outside the legal process.¹⁵

(H) Transitional Justice

There have been renewed concerns over the peace process itself, due to failure of the government in addressing of conflict-era grievances. There have been concerns that this could overshadow other legitimate accomplishments of the peace process. This has resulted from the inability of government and state agencies to prioritize justice delivery and reparations for victims of the armed conflict. There were no guarantees that the basic goals transitional justice – investigating human rights abuses during the armed conflict, ensuring such abuses do not occur again, identifying people responsible for violations and bringing them to justice, ensuring justice and reparations for victims, preserving peace, law and order, and building a national consensus – were like to be fulfilled. This raised led to concerns that the peace process may remain incomplete.

15. Annual Report 2076, NHRC

Both bodies established for ensuring transitional justice in 2014 have failed to perform to satisfactorily. The bodies formed for the first time had their tenure extended twice during which the collection of grievances had been prioritized. The government appointed office bearers of the commissions for a year amidst expectations that they would be appointed in accordance with the Supreme Court order, demands of conflict victims and their families, human rights organizations, and civil society. Their terms in office ended even before people could know that it had accomplished. Weapons and explosives left behind during the conflict period were discovered even this year at various locations. Four children lost their lives in Rolpa District while toying around with explosives that were lying around. This discovery of such explosives suggested that there was still need for building local awareness on the dangers of unexploded mines and other explosives.

(I) Rights of Prisoners

There have been several attempts and calls to secure the rights of the people in prison by different stakeholders. The major problem of Nepal's prison system is holding more inmates than what the prisons were built for. Further, the prisons have very basic facilities and many have not had time repairs over the years. Inmates said they have inadequate space to sleep, the toilet facilities are poor and have had to live in cramped spaces, with inadequate facilities for leisure and recreation. Some prisons had provisions of skills training and allowed inmates to engage in income generating activities.

The prisons had very basic facilities and a large number of them had positions for health assistants at the jails vacant. Even though are provisions in law to allow reducing the time prisoners spend in prison and for elderly inmates, INSEC has recorded many senior citizens still spending time in custody. After the COVID-19 outbreak, the Supreme Court directed the Government of Nepal to release some inmates after which the 385 prisoners were released, including, 165 inmates from various jails and 217 from juvenile facilities.¹⁶

(J) Dissolution of Parliament and Interim Ordinance

In December the Prime Minister dissolved parliament and announced fresh elections in April-May 2021 to be held in two phases. The opposition within the prime minister's own Nepal Communist Party (NCP) as well as other parties and civil society have criticized the move as an assault on the Constitution as well as Nepal federated democratic structure. The Prime Minister's decision attracted 14 petitions at the Supreme Court demanding restoration of parliament and declaration of the government's move as unconstitutional. The Supreme Court was reviewing the petitions when this report was prepared. Even though the government controlled a parliamentary majority, the government opted to issue an ordinance to alter the participation members in the Constitutional Council's meeting to recommend appointments to constitutional bodies. It then recommended the appointments, including commissioners at the National Human Rights Commission, which were disputed. The amendment to the Constitutional Council Act via ordinance, and the dissolution of Parliament immediately after the ordinance was issued raised questions over accountability of the Executive and the disregard of the legislature's role of restraining the government, also because no parliamentary hearings were held after the recommendations for the appointments were announced. The Supreme Court was also reviewing writs challenging the legitimacy of the ordinances to amend the membership and decision-making processes at the Constitutional Council.

16. Initial Report of the situation of Human Rights during the COVID-19 Lockdown, NHRC, 2077 (pp. 24-25)

(K) Human Rights National Framework

The government has prepared the 5-year-long "Fifth National Human Rights Action Plan 2020/21 to 2023/24" in 2020 that will guide the implementation of the Constitutional provisions and those in other laws¹⁷. This framework aims at improving the situation of human rights in Nepal and has been viewed positively. This framework encompasses 20 different sectors related to human rights, including education, healthcare, human resource development, child rights, minority rights, empowerment principles, human rights awareness, employment, prison reform, transitional justice, institutional strengthening, among others and also indicates the programs that would be undertaken towards improving the human rights situation. Also, as part of the framework, the government has committed itself to meeting the Sustainable Development Goals (2015-2030) in areas of ending hunger, providing food for all, ending gender disparity, providing safe water and sanitation, providing safe housing, and for facilitating equal access to justice. This was another positive step in the right direction.

(L) Right to Health

The government has issued its National Health Strategy 2019 for implementing the National Health Policy in 2018.¹⁸ It has also continued initiatives to support healthcare of people with cancer, Alzheimer's, and kidney diseases; and also nutrition awareness, as part of its efforts to reduce maternal and infant mortality. The government campaigns on Vitamin A and inoculation against polio have also continued.¹⁹

The government announced several policies to deal with public health and the COVID-19 pandemic. It presented the "Safe Maternity and Pregnancy Health Right Regulations 2020" and the Public Health Service Regulations 2020 for approval to the Council of Ministers²⁰. It also issued the Directive for Isolation 2020²¹ of COVID-19 patients and for other businesses.

There were taken decisions to provide free treatment and medication for victims of acid attacks and have a dedicated hospital to care for people for acid attacks²². It also decided to support people required to be under regular medication and to cover the costs of treatment of victims of natural disasters.²³

(M) Rights to Food

The right to food security and the right against hunger are basic human rights. The right to food and food security also means ensuring the right to production, distribution, storage, and guaranteeing the of quality produce. The right to food security also encompasses the right to access to food and the access to quality food. According to the International Food Policy Research Institute (IFPRI), the consumption of less than 1800 calories is a situation of hunger²⁴. Nepal ranked 73 out of 117 countries in a global study on hunger. The study had divided hunger into five categories: minimal, average, serious, dangerous, and extremely dangerous. Nepal had scored 20.8 and fell in the range of 20 to 34.9 that was defined as “serious”²⁵. The problem of hunger was more acute in the Karnali Province and other high-altitude areas compared to other parts of Nepal. This year farmers had to face shortages of chemical fertilizers required for agriculture which resulted in lower produce, increasing the risk of food shortages and insecurity²⁶.

The Ministry of Land Management, Cooperatives and Poverty Alleviation issued a directive allowing fragmentation of land into small commercial plots, which has exacerbated fears of farmer groups and civil society about the impending destruction of agricultural land and related impacts²⁷. The Farmer Grant Program Mechanism 2020, the Minimal Support Price for Paddy Scheme Directive 2020, the market promotion mechanism 2020, food and nutrition security booklet 2020, and fertilizer grant distribution management directive 2020²⁸ were issued in 2020 enhance food production, storage and distribution. As with previous years, sugarcane farmers demanded their payments from sugar mills and organized protests in Kathmandu. Although the government came to an agreement with the sugarcane farmers, there was little change on the status of the payments at the end of the year. The farmers were unable to secure support prices for produce, which was not only an infringement of their rights, but also a violation of their right to food security.

(N) National Human Rights Commission

This year 135 reports of human rights infringements and abuses were registered at the National Human Rights Commission (NHRC). The commission also continued investigations on 795 previously reported incidents. Out of those investigated incidents, the commission provided recommendations to the government on 131 cases.²⁹

Although the recommendations made by constitutional bodies are expected to be mandatorily taken up by the government, the implementation of such decisions by government agencies was weak. Even though a committee was formed with representation from the Office of the Prime Minister and Council of Ministers, the Attorney General’s Office and the NHRC, transfer of government representatives assigned to the committee rendered it rendered meaningless³⁰. There were no significant developments on recommendations made by NHRC in previous years as well. There are significant hurdles ahead for the Commission, as the actions undertaken by it have been undermined by the very agencies responsible for taking corrective actions. In 2020 NHRC listed 288 individuals as Human Rights Abusers based on its investigations, but even this assertion did not trigger any legal action against the accused.³¹

Nepal's Participations in International Mechanisms

Nepal is a signatory in over 24 major international treaties and conventions on human rights, including seven of the nine main human rights agreements. This year, the Nepal ratified the United Nations Palermo Protocol of 2000 that seeks to stop human trafficking, particularly women and children by bringing those involved to justice.

Nepal has placed reported to different UN agencies on the status of implementation of international treaties. This year the Nepal delegation submitted its Universal Periodic Review (UPR) to the UPR secretariat. The national report had reported status of implementation of suggestions Nepal had received in the second phase of the UPR. Nepal had responded meaningfully to questions posed by the rapporteur and other special groups. The government also extended an invitation to the rapporteur to visit Nepal to examine issues like food security, extreme poverty, and other human rights. Nepal has also been playing an important role on the promotion and protection of human rights as member of the Human Rights Council.

Conclusions

The ongoing political tussles within the ruling CPN obstructed efficient implementation of several government directives and policies. The infighting in the CPN was also a reason for the sudden halt to the budget session of Parliament, which prevented the enactment of various bills that under consideration, including the bills on the Citizenship Act, National Human Rights Commission Act, Media Council Act, and other human rights-related acts.

Further, the provincial governments also raised objections over what they viewed as the central government's reluctance to allow them to exercise powers in their jurisdiction and to share resources equitably between different tiers of government. Similarly, there was little progress towards developing policies and regulations for ensuring the implementation of laws drafted to operationalize the fundamental rights listed in the Constitution and other laws. This led to difficulties in the implementation of fundamental rights provided by the Constitution.

The government issued several directives to curb the spread of COVID-19, like restrictions on travel, business, and employment. These measures were taken to deal with the global COVID-19 pandemic. Although the pandemic was under control initially, the loosening of restrictions midway caused infections to increase again. The infections resulted in deaths of about 2000 people, and many died at home due to their inability to access healthcare facilities. The access to healthcare facilities was caused by hospitals refusing to admit COVID-19 patients, and high costs of treatment at private institutions. The citizens suffered because of the inability of the government to enforce preventive measures. The right of citizens to receive treatment during pandemics and for highly contagious diseases free of cost in the Constitution was violated repeatedly. The government also either failed in its task of oversight over private hospitals that charged high costs for COVID-19 treatment, or did not want to monitor them even though the issue was repeatedly pointed out by both media and civil society.

Floods and other natural disasters caused the deaths of 300 people in 2020. There were reports of the government being unable to provide safe housing for victims of natural disasters, and unsatisfactory rescue efforts, rehabilitation, and healthcare. Although educational institutions like public and private schools, colleges, and universities that were shut due to the lockdown requirements had started reopening at end-2020, the right to education of a large number of students were violated in 2020. The government had not proposed a plan or policy to address the massive damages caused on the education sector by the pandemic. Further, violence against women has continued. The government dismantled 300 Chhau-Goths in an attempt to root out a deep-rooted problem faced by women in some parts of Nepal. However, this initiative could not gain much success due to the lack of efforts to spread awareness on the harms of the social practice. Many of the Chhau-Goths were reportedly rebuilt after they were dismantled. There have been concerns about the exercise of fundamental rights as well, including the prevalence of caste-based discrimination, the inability of citizens to access healthcare, labor discrimination on migrant workers, unsafe work conditions, and high worker death rates. Similarly, the state has largely failed to effectively protect the rights of Dalits, Janajatis, the persons with disability, women, minorities, and the elderly.

Finally, transitional justice remains to become a government priority. The issue of transitional justice has been raised by civil society groups and victims of conflict for over 14 years, but there has been no substantial progress towards bringing those responsible for serious human rights violations to justice and on providing reparations to the victims.

2.3 State and Human Rights

Legislature

Parliament is an important institution for exercising the sovereignty of the people. It has important policy and lawmaking functions. The Constitution states that no tax will be levied without the approval of the people's representatives. Any form of taxation has to be first presented in the parliament for approval. The House of Representatives consists of 275 representatives elected through two different processes. Nepal has 165 constituencies based on population and geographical suitability and uniqueness, with one person from each constituency elected on the basis of the first-past-the-post (FPTP) system. The parliament has 275 members, including 110 members elected through the Proportional Representation system.¹

The legislature is expected to play an important role in protecting and promoting the fundamental rights enshrined in the Constitution. As the supreme policy-making body, the laws developed by the legislature determine the status of human rights. The role of the parliament in preventing human rights violations by the government and various other bodies, by debating such issues and alerting the government, assist the implementation of the constitutional rights. The legislature has authority to protect and promote human rights of people by enacting laws, debating issues of public concern, passing no-confidence motions against heads of government who violate human rights, impeaching the head of state, building pressure through parliamentary obstructions and using the zero hour to raise human rights concerns. The lawmakers also held human rights violating bodies accountable to parliament through a special resolutions. The Members of Parliament also raised concerns about the human rights violation of people with COVID-19 infections, delays in rescue and rehabilitation of victims of natural disasters, actions of law enforcement agencies, and corruption.²

The legislature can also play an important role in protecting and promoting human rights by ensuring compliance to various human rights treaties, conventions, agreements and international standards approved/ ratified by the state, and by drafting national laws based on these standards and international law. The Law, Justice and Human Rights Committee, is the parliamentary committee that has a leading role in this process.

In the beginning of 2020 the lower house of parliament had a vacant position of Speaker. Concerns were expressed nationally and internationally about the election of Agni Prasad Sapkota, as Speaker, a candidate of the ruling Communist Party of Nepal (CPN). Sapkota faces accusations in the enforced disappearance and subsequent murder of Arjun Lama of Kavre.³ A case filed by Lama's wife, Purnimaya Lama, is still under consideration at the Supreme Court, while the police had listed Sapkota as being at large. His appointment as the Speaker of the House was therefore seen as a move against Nepal's national and international commitments to human rights principles and standards. INSEC issued a press release on January 20, 2020, stating that it was a matter of national shame to have people accused in serious crimes repeatedly being given responsibility in the state instead of being investigated, despite court orders and concerns raised by victims and human rights activists.⁴ The statement said that such decisions of political parties were against the existing legal system and the rule of law. It added that the appointment at a time when world was carefully watching progress in transitional justice and that the action contradicted and made a mockery of Nepal's international commitments, and commitment to human rights. INSEC had even appealed the CPN to review the decision to nominate Sapkota as candidate for the position.

After the resignation of Krishna Bahadur Mahara in 2019, the Deputy Speaker had continued the work of parliament until early 2020. The post of Deputy Speaker, which was vacant after the election of the Speaker, remained vacant throughout the year. The Constitution requires the Speaker and the Deputy Speaker to be of different gender and political parties. However, no attempt was made to select a Deputy Speaker in 2020, which the opposition had been demanding throughout.

The Secretariat of the Federal Parliament issued a notice on July 11, 2020 and announced that the position of Socialist Party MP Sarita Giri had been vacated. Giri was relieved of her position after the Parliament Secretariat informed the Speaker about the letter received from the Socialist Party that had expelled her from the party. As per Article 89 of the Constitution, she was subsequently expelled from the parliament. The Socialist Party decided to expel Giri after she went against the party whip in a vote on the proposed amendment to the Constitution to include Nepal's new map in the national emblem (stamp).⁵

This year the federal parliament was not productive in many ways. The activities of the parliament on issues relating to livelihoods, which should have been actively executed, were halted on various pretexts. In December the parliament was dissolved by the Prime Minister three years into its five-year tenure. It was dissolved by President Bidhyadevi Bhandari at the recommendation of Prime Minister KP Oli on December 20, 2020, and fresh elections were announced for April-May 2021.⁶ The issue of dissolution raised several constitutional questions that was being reviewed by the Supreme Court at the end of the year. The debate is about whether or not the Prime Minister had authority to dissolve the parliament as per the provisions of the Constitution. The parliament that ended on July 2, 2020, was dissolved before it could resume. As it is constitutionally mandatory to convene sessions within six months, the President convened a session of the National Assembly on January 1, 2021 on the recommendation of the government.⁷

Nepal's constitution envisages two chambers in the federal parliament – the National Assembly and House of Representatives. The absence of the House of Representatives also affected the functioning of the National Assembly. In the absence of the House of Representatives, the bills registered and passed in the National Assembly can't become law.

Parliamentary Sessions

In 2020, the parliament had two short sessions. As the winter session is also the bills' session, there were more than 50 bills registered for law making. However, the winter session ended in March due to a nationwide lockdown to control the COVID-19 pandemic. Similarly, the budget session passed only bills on budget and expenditure. Immediately after the end of the winter session, the government issued an ordinance on the division of political parties and the Constitutional Council that became controversial even within the ruling CPN. However, following widespread protests, the government had withdrawn the ordinances.

When the country was plagued by the corona virus pandemic, various issues of public importance entered the parliament's zero hour, which through various resolutions helped to the government towards addressing the matters of public interest. However, it too did not stay in session for long. The parliament is the most important platform for people's representatives to influence public policy, the decisions to be taken by the government, and make urgent legal arrangements to address issues related to the livelihood of citizens. Even the opposition parties had largely ignored their role parliament that being neglected by the government.⁸ Some also said the opposition's inactions were a reflection of its weak presence in the house.⁹ On the recommendation of government, President Bidhya Devi Bhandari adjourned the budget session of the parliament that was underway at the start of the COVID-19 pandemic in Nepal. This decision of government had resulted in widespread criticism, because of the business that was outstanding.¹⁰

Constitution Amendment

The House of Representatives passed the 'Constitution of Nepal (Second Amendment) Bill, 2077', which included an updated map of Nepal, by more than two-thirds of the votes. The meeting of the House of Representatives on June 13, 2020, approved a historic government proposal on the map of Nepal that included Limpiyadhura – Nepali territory encroached by India. The vote for the amendment of the Constitution, had 258 votes in favor and none against. Speaker Agni Sapkota had announced that the amendment bill was passed by more than two-thirds of the votes in the 275-member parliament. A two-thirds majority of the total number of members is required to approve amendment to the Constitution. The Government of Nepal had released a new political map of Nepal on May 20, including the Limpiyadhura, Kalapani Lipulek areas.¹¹

The Secretariat of the Federal Parliament issued a notice on July 9, 2020 announcing the vacation of the seat held by the Janata Samajwadi Party MP, Sarita Giri. She was relieved of her seat after her party informed the Secretariat of her expulsion from the party by Bharat Raj Gautam, its general secretary. The Socialist Party had decided to expel Giri for going against the party whip in the constitution amendment vote.

Delays in Lawmaking

The most important constitutional responsibility of the parliament is to enact laws. It is very important to make and amend laws for the conduct of state. However, Parliament was not able to discharge this constitutional obligation satisfactorily. Consensus was not reached on the Citizenship Act Amendment Bill within the committees of the House of Representatives. Many bills were stalled due to political tensions, and infighting in the ruling CPN that led to the dissolution of parliament. Five bills with reports had been tabled in the House of Representatives after being passed by the parliamentary committees. The dissolution also stalled discussions on five non-governmental bills that had been registered. As result, the National Security Council Bill, Peace and Security Bill, Bill on Accelerated Construction and Development of National Priority Projects; Insurance Bill; Federal Civil Service Bill; Public Service Commission Bill; Nepal Citizenship First Amendment Bill; Bill on Information and Technology, and the Bill on Senior Citizens, remained unapproved.¹²

The dissolution also made the Export-Import Regulation Bill, Military Act (First Amendment) Bill, Public Procurement (Third Amendment) Bill, Competition Promotion and Market Protection Bill presented in the House of Representatives inactive. Likewise, Nepal Media Council Bill, Kathmandu Valley Public Transport Bill, Nepal Special Services Bill, Policy Research Institute Bill, Plant Protection Bill, Seed (Second Amendment) Bill that were tabled in the House of Representatives through National Assembly were also not passed.¹³ Five non-government bills under consideration in the House of Representatives were also included in the list of inactive bills.¹⁴

Zero Hour and Special Time of Parliament

In parliamentary practice, zero hour and special time are considered as a forum for raising important issues, also from the point of view of human rights. In zero hour and special time, MPs debate issues of public importance and public interest, and also draw government attention to the concerns. As per the rules of the House of Representatives, the concerned minister is required to respond to the queries raised by the parliamentarians during zero hour and special time within five days. Section 15 (1) of the Rules states, "The Speaker may, considering the workload of the House, set zero hour and special time for the presentation of current issues." Accordingly, Article 15 (2), "As per the Sub-rule (1), concerned ministers will have to provide the answers to the issues raised in the zero hour and special time to the House through the Speaker within five days." However, a number of questions raised by the MPs never get answered.¹⁵

As in the previous years, the lawmakers drew the attention of the government on various issues through the zero hour and special time. These included concerns over the provision of health rights and treatment to those affected by the COVID-19 pandemic, motion to draw attention of the government on the issue of people who were unable to return home, and those who had to walk all the way to their home districts due to the lockdown, a motion about questions asked to the concerned minister, a motion on issues of urgent public importance, among others.

Activities of the Parliamentary Committees

This year too, as in previous years, various committees of the parliament remained active in addressing the irregularities and matters of public importance in various sectors including human rights and contemporary issues. The committees played a positive role in investigating the incidents of human rights violations, seeking information about such incidents (from the Office of the Prime Minister and Council of Ministers and officials), and giving necessary instructions to the government agencies.

A Parliamentary Special Investigation Committee was formed on June 5, 2020 to investigate the Soti incident in Chaurjahari Municipality of Rukum West, where a number of Dalits had been killed in a clash. A nine-member special parliamentary committee was formed under the leadership of MP Devendra Poudel. Members of the committee were MPs Ekwal Miya, Durga Poudel, Parvati Kumari Bishunke, Prakash Rasaili, Bimala BK, Maheshwar Jung Gahatraj, Min Bahadur Bishwakarma and Ram Sahaya Prasad Yadav. The committee completed its investigation and submitted its report within the stipulated 30 days time. Six people, including Nawaraj BK, who had come from Jajarkot to pick up a 17-year-old “upper caste” girl for marriage from Soti village, were “killed” on May 23, 2020. The victims claimed that the group of youth was beaten up by the villagers and thrown them in the Bheri River. Some of the youths who gone there with Nawaraj managed to save their lives by jumping in the river. The committee submitted its investigation report to the Speaker on July 14, 2020,¹⁶ and the report was forwarded to the government on July 23, 2020 for necessary action.

The Committee on Law, Justice and Human Rights of the House of Representatives objected the decision of the Government of Nepal on September 27, 2020¹⁷ not to provide free treatment to people infected by the corona virus. The Ministry of Health had made the decision public, saying that the cost of treatment should be borne by the patient and the family should manage the body of the person who died in home isolation. The committee reminded the government of Article 35 of the Constitution that guarantees citizens free basic health care from the state, no one could be deprived of emergency health care and every citizen had equal access to health care.¹⁸

Parliamentary Committee on Industry, Commerce, Labour and Consumer Welfare directed the government to make arrangements for the payment of the remaining amount due to the sugarcane farmers within a week. The committee meeting also directed the Ministry of Labor, Employment and Social Security to submit a report to the committee within 15 days after monitoring and taking action on the non-receipt of wages by workers across the country.¹⁹

Contrary to the directives given by the State Affairs and Good Governance Committee of the House of Representatives, the Council of Ministers decided to promote Bishwaraj Pokhrel to the post of Additional Inspector General of Nepal Police. In the parliamentary system, the government implements the instructions given by the parliamentary committee. Committee chairperson Shashi Shrestha had instructed the government not fulfill the position that had been created in the police contrary to the federal structure provided by the Constitution.²⁰ The committee said, “Contrary to the federal structure provided by the Constitution, the provision in the ordinance to separate the three districts of the Kathmandu Valley from Bagmati Pradesh, and the post of Additional Inspector General of Police from the concerned ministry, is not included in the report and proposal of management survey.” The committee had instructed the Government of Nepal, the Ministry of Home Affairs and the Police

Headquarters not to implement the appointment to the position as the issue of creating it was against the Constitution, law, rules and procedures.²¹

Similarly, the Parliamentary Committee on Industry, Commerce, Labor and Consumer Welfare directed the government to send domestic workers for foreign employment only on seven different conditions. The first condition was putting in place a separate and concrete legal provisions regarding the services, conditions and facilities of domestic workers in the country that wanted to take domestic workers from Nepal.²² The second condition was that the labor agreement should ensure basic labor rights of the workers (wages, leave, social security, occupational safety and health, working hours, insurance, additional work facilities). Likewise, the third condition required setting up a strong and effective resolving problems faced by the workers, and the fourth was to ensure that those headed to work domestic workers were trained, could communicate in the language of the host country, and had acquired basic knowledge of traditions, culture and customs there.

As a fifth condition, the committee sought to ensure equal treatment for the same work between the workers of the host countries, and Nepali workers.²³ The sixth condition was the need for legal provisions to take action against the sponsor, employer or family member who committed physical, mental and/ or sexual violence against the domestic worker. Another condition was the requirement to allow the domestic easy access to his/ her family and embassy of Nepal in the country. In 2015, the then Committee on International Relations and Labor of the Parliament had directed the government to stop sending domestic workers for foreign employment until a concrete law was enacted.

Nepal has been sending domestic workers only to Jordan, which has an agreement for such workers. The parliamentary committee has instructed the government to amend its existing directive of seven years, and start sending domestic workers only after complying to the terms and conditions above.

A sub-committee set up by the Education and Health Committee of the House of Representatives to monitor government's work in COVID-19 control concluded that the government had performed weakly in terms of conducting PCR tests and managing food for PCR-positive patients. The sub-committee formed under MP Jeevan Ram Shrestha of the ruling party had suggested 17-points for improving upon the weaknesses. The committee said corona-infected people were forced to stay home due to delays in the implementation of the decision taken by the Council of Ministers to create an integrated isolation facility in Kathmandu Valley. The subcommittee found that the PCR reports were delayed, labs across the country lacked integrated coordination for immediate reporting, the government did not even provide the isolation facilities a menu of what to feed the infected, and quarantine facilities were provided with very little money for food. It added that the government had not provided risk allowance to doctors and health workers involved in the treatment of infected people and also pointed to the government's failures to manage skilled human resource in ICU and ventilator wards at the designated hospitals.

A virtual meeting of the State Affairs and Good Governance Committee on August 30 directed the Ministry of Home Affairs to conduct PCR tests of all inmates at the prisons. Committee Chairperson Shashi Shrestha said that the committee had instructed the government to remain vigilant on the issue of serious humanitarian concerns at the times of crisis as the inmates were not allowed to go out.²⁴

The Women and Social Affairs Committee directed the government to control and manage the sales and distribution of acid, and to amend the penalties for perpetrators. Concluding that incidents of acid attack had not stopped, on August 3, the committee directed the government to regulate the sale and distribution of acid²⁵ and directed the Ministry of Home Affairs to make it mandatory to document the details of those who purchased acids. The committee also asked the government to immediately make amendments to the existing law to accommodate its recommendations.²⁶ The committee also directed the Office of the Council of Ministers, Ministry of Home Affairs, Ministry of Women and Children and Senior Citizens to provide legal assistance and psycho-social counseling to address the physical, mental and emotional trauma of victims of acid attacks. The committee had a discussion with the secretary of the National Women Commission, officials of the Ministry of Home Affairs, Ministry of Women, Children and Senior Citizens and the victims of the acid attack on July 4.

The parliamentary committee also drew the attention of the government to immediately start preparation to bring back the citizens who had been stranded in different areas, and had lost jobs due to COVID-19. A meeting of the Law, Justice and Human Rights Committee on May 5 instructed the government to start preparations immediately for the same. It also drew the attention of the government to prepare for the rescue of the citizens who had gone to India for employment and were facing trouble returning home, and the need for preparing a long-term plan for supporting citizens living abroad.

Similarly, the committee also drew the attention of the Ministry of Health and Population to arrange COVID-19 treatment in private hospitals as well. But said private hospitals without enough facilities for COVID-19 treatment should not be compelled to do the same.

Parliamentary Hearing Committee

Parliamentary hearings are parts of the democratic process to make the executive accountable to the legislature by testing the competence, ability and sincerity of people proposed for appointment by the executive to positions of public importance. Article 292 (1) of the Constitution provides that parliamentary hearings shall be held in accordance with federal law before the appointment of the Chief Justice, judges of the Supreme Court, members of the Judicial Council, heads or office bearers of constitutional bodies and ambassadors to be appointed on the recommendation of the Constitutional Council. Clause (2) of the said article provides for the formation of a 15-member joint committee for the purpose of clause (1), consisting of members of both the chambers of the federal parliament.²⁷

Similarly, clause (3) of the same section, requires barring of members of the joint committee from appearing before the Supreme Court to advocate during their tenure as members of the federal parliament. The parliamentary hearing system that has been in practice in Nepal in the recent years has made a positive contributions to the protection and promotion of human rights. It is believed that the constitutional practice of presenting the persons concerned at the parliamentary hearings before appointment to constitutional bodies, including the National Human Rights Commission, will make the incumbents accountable to the people and will hesitate before committing human rights violators from their positions. In 2020 Mahendra Bahadur Pandey was appointed as the ambassador to People's Republic of China, and non-resident ambassador to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and Mongolia. The hearing committee also approved the names of Yuvaraj Khatiwada as ambassador to the United States, Lokdarshan Regmi as ambassador to the United Kingdom, and Nirmal Kumar Bishwakarma as ambassador to South Africa.

MP Development Fund

The government continued with this infrastructure development partnership program at the local level despite protests against the free-hand to MPs to fund projects. The government allocated NRs. 6.60 billion for the program, that each elected MP can disburse (NRs. 40 million per MP). Just like the federal government, the provincial governments have also begun allocating money for state assembly members to spend. However, the Rs. 6.60 billion allocated for the program is not regulated by law. The main opposition party in parliament, the Nepali Congress, demanded that the government should close down the program.²⁸ However, it did not say that Nepali Congress MPs would not accept the money. There was a demand that the allocated budget should be spent on controlling the COVID-19 pandemic as development works were hampered due to the pandemic.²⁹ The allegations that the money of the Parliamentary Development Fund was misused, spent for the benefit of party cadres and had not contributed much to the livelihood of the people remained unaddressed.

Ordinances

Amid internal tensions within the ruling party, the government ended the parliamentary session on July 2, 2020 and issued several ordinances. The government withdrew its ordinance on the Constitutional Council on April 20, 2020, following widespread criticisms and protest after it had been issued. President Bidhya Devi Bhandari issued three ordinances on June 26, 2020. These included the Acid and Other Hazardous Chemicals (Regulation) Ordinance 2020, Criminal Offenses and Criminal Procedure Amendment Ordinance 2020, Nepal Police and State Police (Operation, Supervision and Coordination) (First Amendment) Ordinance 2020.³⁰

The Acid and Other Hazardous Chemicals (Regulation) Ordinance 2077 BS prepared to take strict action against those making such attacks. It was issued on September 28. The Ordinance requires official permission to sell and distribute acid. Similarly, the ordinance amended the Acts on Criminal Offenses and Criminal Procedure, to provide harsher punishment for acid attackers compared to the past. Now, acid attack on the face is punishable by up to 20 years in prison. Victims will also receive NRs. 1 million as compensation from the perpetrator's property. Likewise, sales and distribution of acid will now require official permission from the District Administration Office (DAO). After the ordinance was issued, Muskan Khatun, a victim of acid attack from Parsa district, said that the law brought by the government has raised hopes that victims like her would get justice and that such heinous attacks would be controlled.³¹

After the dissolution of the parliament on December 20, 2020 the government reissued the ordinance on the Constitutional Council and appointed 45 people to the long-vacant positions at various Constitutional commissions. A writ has been filed at the Supreme Court challenging the legitimacy of the decision. There is a constitutional provision that requires parliamentary hearing to be held within 45 days of the appointments to the Constitutional bodies. In the absence of a parliament, no such hearing had been done at the time this report was prepared.

Some Notable Bills Passed by Provincial Legislatures

Article 175 of the Constitution of Nepal provides for a provincial legislature. As per the Constitution, the legislatures of provincial are unicameral, and are known as provincial assemblies. The Bagmati Province passed the Bills related to Appropriation, Finance, and Vehicle and Transport this year. Similarly, the Far-Western Province passed 16 Acts and 25 Bills. The Acts and Bills have been approved by the Far-Western Provincial head Sharmila Pant. The Lumbini Provincial Assembly, likewise, passed 58 bills in a period of three months. All the bills passed by the provincial assembly have been verified/ approved.

Conclusion

The work of parliament was not effective owing to different circumstantial factors and tensions within the ruling party. The issues raised in the parliament were neither given importance they demanded nor were they addressed. Instead, the act avoiding parliamentary scrutiny and issuing ordinance was preferred by the government. A number of bills that had been under consideration for a long time still remained unresolved. There was no discussion in the parliament on the bill related to the National Human Rights Commission and the bill on the Media Council that had triggered widespread protests. Issues such as low turnout of MPs in the parliament, the Parliamentary Development Fund, and long-standing obstructions of sessions continued this year as well. The legitimacy of the directives and decisions made by the parliamentary committees was put into question as concerned bodies of government that neglected the directives. Parliamentary activities took place without a deputy speaker throughout the year.

The parliament that had been elected for a five-year term was dissolved in just three years on December 20, 2020. A video of a speech of the Chairman of the Constituent Assembly, Subash Chandra Nemwang, stating that the age of the parliament was set at five years in the Constitution of Nepal so that the mistakes of the past were not repeated, had become public. A number of political parties and civil society said the dissolution of the parliament was equivalent to a constitutional coup. Supporters of the Prime Minister's move argued that the dissolution was the exercise of the prerogative of the chief executive. There was a difference of opinion in the opposition Nepali Congress as to whether or not to speak out on a matter that was under consideration at the Court. Although the issue of dissolution of parliament and fresh public mandate are common in parliamentary democracies, in Nepal people have been fed up with long-standing political instability that such moves have led to in the past. That was why, according to the former chair of the Constituent Assembly, the assembly had made adequate provisions to ensure that the parliament remained intact throughout its five-year term.

Chapter 3

3.1 Status of Implementation of the Labor Act at Tea Gardens of Province 1

Background

After the Labor Act took effect on July 16, 2017 there was widespread hope that the minimum wages of organized and unorganized laborers would be assured of minimum wages and that their social security would also be taken into account. The inclusion of the right to work in the Constitution was also reason that the problems related to labor would be addressed. The Constitution guarantees reasonable wage to every worker and the law has provisions for contribution-based social security. However, despite these provisions the problem faced by laborers remains as it was due to the lack of effective implementation.

As result little has changed in the conditions of workers at tea gardens of Taplejung, Bhojpur, Dhankuta, Terhathum, Panchthar, Ilam, Jhapa and Morang districts in Province 1. Nepal has 12,066 hectares of land under tea cultivation, and about 9236 tea gardens with Ilam alone having over 5,500 tea plantations in the district.

The situation for tea sector laborers has not changed despite the enactment of the law and the fixation of minimum wages by the government because of non-compliance by tea garden and factory owners of the provisions. The industry owners had said that the new labor law could not be enforced in the tea sector. Tea garden and factory owners had said that they would not be able to implement the provisions of the new law in the tea sector, and the law remains practically unimplemented. The industry opposed the law saying that each additional worker would add an additional 35 percent to the cost. Before the enforcement of the new law, tea sector workers were receiving a daily wage of NRs. 278, five percent provident fund, five percent allowance and 13 days of public holidays, 12 days of casual leave, seven days of sick leave and a bonus equivalent to the wage of 26 days annually.

The new law requires employers to set aside 10 percent for provident fund, 8.33 percent for gratuity, and 1.67 percent for insurance, and provide 14 days of public holidays, 18 days of casual leave, 12 days of sick leave and a bonus equivalent to the wage of 26 days to all types of workers – permanent, temporary, seasonal and daily wage. This would make the total annual amount payable NRs. 1,19,540. The Government had announced that the law would also apply to tea workers in the 2018/19 budget, but implementation has not taken place owing to opposition by garden and factory owners and the inadequate official efforts to ensure compliance.

Tea Labor and Wages

Tea workers are deprived of their wages and other facilities such as insurance, allowances and other protection measures. Typically, tea workers of Jhapa and Ilam district are put to work without formal contracts or appointment letters. Generally, when the Government revises wages and facilities for all workers, factory and garden owners also add to the workloads before making revisions. Many workers have already moved to other sectors and those that remain fear losing their jobs if they raise a voice against management to secure their rights. Even workers who have worked in the tea gardens for over half a decade still face difficulties in meeting their daily needs. Further, many workers are unable to change work – when opportunity comes by – for fear of losing the accommodation at the tea garden. Even workers at the tea garden leased by the Government in Ilam had not been able to receive the official minimum wage causing them to protest for nine months in July 2018. The new wages were eventually implemented but took effect only from the date of agreement with the management. The workers have been disappointed with the owners of tea gardens and factories but have remained unable to do much because many of them also reside on land belonging to the tea plantations that they could lose if they began working elsewhere.

Objectives

The objectives of this study are

- To collect information on status of implementation of policies, laws and programs of the Government in relation to tea sector workers.
- To understand the financial effects on tea workers as a result of non- or ineffective implementation of government policies and laws, and
- To draw attention of management of tea gardens and government agencies on the problems faced by people working in the tea sector.

Research Methods

Information for this write up was gathered through multiple approaches, including site visits (tea estate, factories, worker living quarters, etc.); and interviews with representatives of labor unions, workers of tea estate and factories, activists, representatives of tea estate management, etc. Information was also obtained from published articles, relevant books, the Constitution of Nepal, and existing policies, laws, and regulations. The literature review also included national and international provisions on minimum wages, international covenant on economic, social, and cultural rights, etc.

The study was limited to the status of implementation of the legal wages, including daily wage and other facilities in tea gardens of Jhapa and Ilam; and the nature of their work, their protests, and other facilities they had been provided.

Analysis and Findings

The tea laborers received the officially approved wages only nine months after it was enforced in July 2018, and were not paid for the nine months before it took effect for them. Government has specified the minimum wage to be NRs. 385. However, the workload of many workers also increased alongside the new wage. The management of the tea gardens have set new rules for daily collection of tea leaves: 20 kgs for hand picking and 50 kgs for picking with machines. The workers are not paid if the condition is not met, or are paid at a reduced rate. Before the new law took effect, the workers had to pick 16 kgs of tea leaves per day.

Majority of the laborers were unable to meet the target of daily collection set by the management and this had barred them from receiving their minimum daily wage. Around 100 workers quit their job after the new rules took effect and have moved to different professions. Most of the workers at the tea gardens did not want to disclose their identities while speaking to this reporter fearing reprisal from management. One such worker said the management continuously threatens to fire them from their jobs, particularly when they raise the issue of rights.

The Labor Act, 2017 provides for 45 days of sick leave. However, the tea workers did not have this facility. "If the laborer does not use his/her sick leave, there is no provision of accumulating it for later use," a worker said. He added, "if a laborer is not present at work regularly for a month, he/she is expelled by the management." The Kanyam Tea Estate had 64 permanent staff and 50 seasonal laborers.

Many workers were on the job from 8 A.M. to 5 P.M. and many of them were unable to receive their minimum wage for not being able to meet the daily picking target set by the management. The management of the tea garden had also not provided appointment letters to the laborers. In Jhapa and Ilam districts, the reduction in the wages for laborers not meeting the daily targets was done by dividing minimum daily wage by the leaves plucked in kgs, to come to a per kg rate for reduction. Accordingly, a worker who collected 40 kgs (against the target of 50 kgs), received NRs. 70 less than the daily minimum wage.

Overall, only about 10 percent of the workers were receiving the daily minimum wage. Using machines for collecting tea leaves was particularly difficult for women workers because of the weight of the machines. The workers also said they did not receive money during festivals in 2019.

Seven tea estates including Kanyam, Soktim, Chilimkot, Barne of Jhapa, Tokala, Baradashi were leased by the government to Triveni Sanghai Group for a period of 50 years in 2000. The tea workers had been protesting for higher wages with management even before the Government leased the properties. The non-resolution of the problem had led to resignation of 473 workers from Kanyam before the property was leased out. In 2020, there were 65 permanent workers, including 11 males at Kanyam.

The situation was not different in Ilam that had 100 permanent workers before the management was handed to the private company. In 2020, there were 22 permanent workers at the company. According to Saraswati Chaulagain a worker at Ilam, "few workers received a pension but the majority of them had resigned due to exploitation by the management."

The issues workers faced included the use of machines to pluck tea leaves in the rainy season. This is a time when the machine could be damaged by rain; it is also a time when the workers could get electric shocks when the machine is wet, said another worker Goma Pradhan.

The Labor Act 2017 requires employers to bear the health expenses of workers and their families. There is a provision of providing health insurance of NRs. 100,000 for the spouse of the worker and NRs. 700,000 as life insurance of the worker. Likewise, the law also requires formation of security and health committee for the workers with the participation of management. Such a committee had not been formed and the management did not even pay for minor treatments.

The Government of Nepal's Gazette published on August 16, 2018 has specified the basic monthly income of tea laborers as being NRs. 6,469 and allowances of NRs. 4312. It has also specified the daily wage of NRs. 385 and hourly wage of NRs. 31, including the allowances. The Gazette has also mentioned the need to provide provident fund and gratuity to workers. But the implementation is not ensured and monitored by the government.

National Laws on Worker Rights

Article 34 of Constitution of Nepal says there shall be fair work practices for all workers. It defines a worker as someone who works mentally and physically for the employer and adds that there shall be fair wages, facilities and social security based on contribution for workers, who are also given the right to form and participate in trade unions.

As per the education series published by INSEC in December, 2009, landless workers working in the agricultural sector on wage are agricultural workers. Those who sell their labor in agricultural sector are categorized—former bonded laborers, and workers of agricultural farms. Agriculture census of Nepal 1991 has categorized agricultural workers in three categories; workers working on wage, workers working in own farms, and workers working on kind rather than on wage.

Government began specifying the daily wage of farm workers on January 13, 2000 when it set it at NRs. 60 for eight hours worked in a day. This was revised over time to NRs. 80, NRs. 100, NRs. 120, NRs. 200 and NRs. 253. Similarly, the Gazette of February 1, 2016 fixed NRs. 253 as daily wage for tea workers and an extra NRs. 30 for the workers and guards at the factories. The same Gazette had the provision of monthly wage of a worker to be a minimum of NRs. 6375, with not provisions for extra allowances for salaried staff.

The tea garden management said that it had made payments as specified by the government. Indira Gurung, manager of Ilam Tea Garden said the company was providing wages and facilities as mentioned in the laws. She added that no workers were forced to do heavy work and work over time. Subash Sanghai of Sanghai Group also said that his company had been providing all the facilities as required by the law.

But the tea workers were disappointed with the privatization of tea gardens. They said they could neither be assured of minimum facilities nor could they protest against the management for better work conditions. Tara Parajuli, a lawyer, said effective implementation of laws, policies and rules made by the Government could address the problem as nobody was above those law. She said taking legal action could help end the exploitation of workers at tea gardens.

Conclusion

Tea workers of Kanyam, Ilam, Saktim and Chilimkot tea gardens were working with lesser facilities, even though the wages were in accordance with the law. Many said after the implementation of the new law, their workloads also increased with the new wages. The workers said it was difficult for them to meet daily targets and had to face wage reductions when they did not meet the target. Many workers still felt that their management had not been fully complying with the law and feared leaving their jobs as that would also mean losing living spaces at the tea gardens.

Recommendations

The main recommendation is conducting the monitoring by the government for ensuring compliance as per the Constitution of Nepal and Labour Act. Similarly, the government should engage the management and employee for resolving the issues of labour rights. Human rights activists and media can assist in the process by bringing issues faced by workers to public debate, and also informing workers of their rights. Attention is also needed to ensuring social security of workers alongside regular revision of wages based on the cost of living and the market situation.

Chapter 3

3.2 Witchcraft, an Evil Practice: Continuation of Violence against Women

1. Background

The Nepali dictionary explains the term “witch” as being “a woman who is evil and knows the art of witchcraft”, which suggested the cultural roots of the inhuman practice of accusing women of being witches, mainly those who are poor, single, old, socially despised, and those who are marginalized. Religious texts such as the Tantra Shashtra and Shiva Puran say that women who can call upon different Gods and Goddesses to execute their special tasks are said to be witches. Such women are believed to be able to differentiate between Gods and demons and perform different activities through supernatural powers. The superstition of presence of witches exist in different societies around the world and the belief is more deeply entrenched in less developed and marginalized remote societies. Belief in witchcraft is more common in communities with poor education. As consequence, even women who are poor and are marginalized are usually targeted for the torture that accompanies the accusation.

Nepal has various laws that aim to reduce and end such violence on women but the violence remains unabated mainly because of the weak enforcement. Nepal’s still largely patriarchal society is another reason why the level of attention and interest required for ending such harmful social practices has been lacking. This article aims to draw attention of concerned stakeholders to the violence done to women by accusing them of practicing witchcraft.

Nepali women continue face various forms of violence that stem from the widespread poverty, illiteracy, lack of awareness, and traditional and social values and beliefs that remain largely unchanged. One form of such violence is accusing women of witchcraft and torturing and humiliating them. All the women who have faced the abuse have little or no access to the law and are forced to bear the torture due to lack of economic resources and social support to challenge the accusers, and illiteracy. As result there has been no reduction in cases of beatings, forceful removal of their hair and forcing them to eat of feces with impunity. In 2020 INSEC documented 24 such victims and 14 in 2019.

Objectives

The objectives of this article are

- To study the problems of human rights violation of women alleged of witchcraft.
- To study laws, policies and rules made to reduce such accusations and identify challenges and problems in enforcement.

Law enforcement for preventing women being accused of witchcraft continues to remain a major challenge. There are sanctions against such acts but most of the women are forced to endure and suffer owing to a number of factors including traditional values and beliefs, poverty, illiteracy, etc. As result weak women continue to be tortured and mistreated when there is a death or illness in the community and even when cattle fall sick or die.

Research Methods

The study was largely based on secondary sources of information (books, booklets, newspapers, reports etc.) and primary data collected through interviews, site visits, and discussions and consultations with people in the community.

The study was limited in understanding the problem in Province 2. Data was gathered from all eight districts in the province, and the interviews also included experts involved in the study of the practice.

A Socially-sanctioned Form of Violence

The attacks on women believed to be practicing witchcraft social protection rooted in deeply entrenched social values and beliefs, traditions and superstitions. The women accused of witchcraft are forced to endure physical and psychological torture, which in extreme cases, have even led them to commit suicide. The accusation have been used for economic gain, land encroachment and to display power and control over the weak.

The word witch itself embodies intimidation and is a slur. If someone falls sick or dies in the village, the so-called local witch doctors accuse someone they know is weak and helpless, who then become victims of the accusation and the accompanying torture. The prevalence of the problem is difficult to estimate because many cases are suppressed and are rarely reported.

Accusing someone of witchcraft is a crime still every year there are reports of such accusations and torture of women for the alleged practice, which also has social sanction in many communities. Such social violence is rooted in social beliefs, traditions and cultures¹. The torture to those accused of witchcraft are beating, shaving of their scalps, and abuse.

Cases of Witchcraft in Province 2

INSEC has records of the highest number of such accusations in Province – 2, where the victims have been women who are poor and from socioeconomically marginalized communities. INSEC has documented 91 victims of alleged witchcraft in the eight districts of the province in the past six years. In one case, the accused woman was killed by her own family members.

Number of Victims in 2020 Documented by INSEC

INSEC documented 24 victims of witchcraft in 2020 and 19 victims in 2019. The accused women in most of cases were treated inhumanly by both their neighbors and relatives.

Of 24 cases documented in 2020, 11 were from Siraha District. The victimized women were between 25 to 85 years of age and had been beaten not just by their neighbors but also by their own children following the accusations.

Complaints had been filed in all of these cases but only five were in the process of investigation, where the formal complaint remained to be registered. The police had initiated legal proceedings in seven cases and those accused in 16 cases had been arrested. One case had been reconciled.

Forcing Accused Women to Consume Feces

A village panchayat – a committee of village elders – beat and forced a 41-year-old woman, to consume feces on September 12, 2020. She was accused of being a witch and making Dharma Nath Yadav's daughter ill. The Panchayat had met at the Shiva Temple in the village. A "witch-doctor" from India had accused her of being the cause of illness. She was beaten and abused. Her son Ganesh Yadav and husband were also beaten. Ironically an elected member of Nawarajpur Rural Municipality-5 was also present at the place of incident.

The victim was treated at the BP Koirala Institute of Health Sciences in Dharan. The victim family filed a complaint against Santosh Yadav, Krishna Dev Yadav, Brahma Dev Yadav, Baija Nath Yadav, Dev Nath Yadav, Dharma Nath Yadav, Mahesh Yadav, and Pashupati Yadav on September 20. However, the police reached the scene of the crime only after one week and arrested Santosh Yadav on October 8. All of the others accused were on run.

Stakeholder Views

Bhola Paswan, Journalist and Human Rights Activist:

Even in this age of information technology we still have superstitions of witchcraft rooted in the society. The lack of literacy and awareness are the main reasons for the prevalence of the tradition. There are legal provisions for addressing the problem but enforcement remains weak. There is need for widespread

Death of a Woman Accused of Witchcraft

In a case of Siraha District, Sudama Devi Sah, 85, had been accused of witchcraft and was killed by her son. Police arrested the son, Ram Avatar Sah, 45, and daughter-in-law Manju Devi Sah, 40, on October 31, 2020 and December 27, 2020, respectively. Sudama Devi was accused of witchcraft after the Manju Devi became ill. Sudama Devi was killed on October 29. The victim's maternal family members had filed the complaint at the Area Police Office in Mirchaiya.

Suicide Following Mental Torture

Women accused of witchcraft are tortured so extremely that they cannot bear the pain and commit suicide. Fuli Devi Mukhiya of Mahottari was beaten by her brother and sister-in-law accusing her of witchcraft. The two were suspected of killing her but the case was as suicide due to torture.

Buchiya Devi of Mahottari, Loharpatti drank poison after being tortured. She had also been threatened of shaving her head and parading her without clothes on the streets. Those threats were suspected to be the reason of her suicide.

awareness in communities where the practice is entrenched.

Anita Devkota, Province Coordinator, Single Women Group:

There have been many incidents of alleged witchcraft in Province-2. This is mainly due to lack of education and awareness. So, awareness must be enhanced. The cases have increased because laws are not enforced. Victims are deprived of justice and in some cases, reconciled when perpetrators are influential. All the perpetrators must face legal actions.

Muni Das, woman activist:

Dalit women are more vulnerable to such accusations. Province-2 has a large number of such cases of inhumane behavior. We must make people aware about the problem.

Krishna Prasad Pangen, SP, District Police Office, Bara:

Such cases are filed and legal procedures are undertaken. The perpetrators are eventually arrested and legal actions are taken.

National and International Legal Provisions for Protecting Women's Rights

The Constitution of Nepal has guaranteed women's rights in Article 38. In sub-section 3, it prohibits all forms of physical, mental, sexual, psychological, and other kinds of abuses on women. Such acts are punishable and the victims are required to be compensated by law. However, women are still unable to lead secure lives and the cycle of violence rooted in society.

Similarly, the International Declaration on Human Rights, 1948 has mentioned that all people are equal in freedom and respect (Article 2). Articles 1 to 30 of the Declaration assures people's rights based on ethnicity, gender, language, religion, and political beliefs. The Declaration and all other treaties to which Nepal is a state party have provisions making states responsible for ending all types of discrimination against women.

National Legal Provisions

The General Code (Muluki Ain) first enacted in 1910 BS had made the accusation of witchcraft punishable. If anyone is accused of witchcraft, the person would be punished along with those who involved. But there were no clear provision of punishment to the person who abused women. Likewise, the parliament enacted the Public Crime Act and Abuse Act but there are no clear provisions for discouraging the accusation of witchcraft. The National Human Rights Commission had recommended the Government to enact a unified law for controlling and eradicating violent acts in cases such as allegations of witchcraft² and a Supreme Court decision had also ordered the government along the same lines. On July 24, 2015, almost a decade after the order the parliament enacted a law against Accusation of Witchcraft Act, 2015³.

Act Regarding Crime and Punishment, 2015

A bill to punish evil practices such as accusations of witchcraft was registered in House of Representatives by the then Minister of Women, Children and Social Welfare, Nilam K.C. on June 27, 2014. The parliament enacted the law on August 3, 2015 which has sanctions for accusations of witchcraft and other forms of abuse of women. Accordingly, a person found guilty of accusation of witchcraft could be sentenced to six to eight months in jail and fined from NRs. 5,000 to 100,000. There is an increment of the sanction by 25 percent if the person found guilty is a holder of public office.

Conclusion and Recommendations

Even in the age of science and technology, women in certain parts of Nepal continued to be abused on the accusation of practicing witchcraft. Every year, women are victimized by their families and neighbors of such accusations but not all of the cases are reported. The accusation of witchcraft is an act that is punishable by the law and therefore, there is need for strict enforcement to ensure that the practice is rooted from society. This would require an extensive public campaign to inform communities of the provisions in law, and also to educate them about traditions and social practices that cause harm on women.

Chapter 3

3.3 Natural Disasters in Sindhupalchok and Their Effects on Economic and Social Rights

Background

Sindhupalchok is geographically situated at the central part of Himalayas at altitudes ranging from 735 to 6,966 above sea level. The land is composed of sedimentary rocks and loose soil particles and ranges and has three major rivers – Bhotekoshi, Sunkoshi, and Indrawati. The district has been prone to natural disasters owing to the high mountains, steep hills, and fast flowing rivers. The district has had major disasters in the recent past including the 2015 earthquake, the landslide at Jure July 2014, Jalbire Khamare landslide August 25, 2014 and floods in the Bhotekoshi (2016), Barhabise landslide (2020), and Lidi landslide (2020), among others.

Objectives

The objectives of this study were to:

1. Document and publish information on the impacts of natural disasters in different parts of the district and explore remedial measures, and
2. Support disaster victims to access support and to examine the efficacy of relief, relocation and rehabilitation support and systems.

Methods

The report is largely based on site visits, consultations, and interviews with displaced families and stakeholders. The study has also used information from secondary sources.

Disaster Damage

A. Earthquake of 2015

The entire district has faced high earthquake risks. The district suffered major damages in earthquakes of 1988 and 2015. The earthquake of 2015 had caused the loss of 3,557 lives and injured 1,569 people, and INSEC had documented damage of 67,383 households. The earthquake had affected the entire population, including children, women, and the elderly across all local jurisdictions. Many of the people were living in fragile and high-risk regions but in the absence of relocation opportunities, the people of Lidi, Nampha, Gumba, and Bolden had to return to their original residences after relief operations. The landslides have left deep scars at all these locations and is still vulnerable to future disasters. The loss at the settlements above can be avoided by relocating them to safer areas.

B. Loss to Landslides

The district has suffered major losses to landslides in the recent years. The Jure landslide on August 1 had killed 145 people and injured 15. It had swept away 113 houses and affected 319 families. The landslide of Jalbire Khamare of August 25, 2014 had killed five people and buried 18 houses. Similarly, that of Jambu on July 8, 2020 had cost two lives and the whereabouts of 17 people remained unknown; another five had been injured.

Table 1: Details of disaster damage in Sindhupalchowk (2014-2020)

S.No	Year of Disaster	Death	Injury	Disappearance	Displaced Families	Source

The landslide had buried 39 houses and damaged another 63. Another landslide at Khamare of Jalbire had swept away 10 houses on July 8, 2020 and one at Bulkot of Bhotekoshi Rural Municipality-5 of July 8 had killed four people, injured four and swept away four houses.

Likewise, the landslide of Lidi of Jugal Rural Municipality-2 of August 14, 2020 had killed 35, buried two, injured six and buried 29 houses. Similarly, another 172 houses had been affected by the Lidi landslide¹ and another one at Phulping-katti of Bhotekoshi Rural municipality on July 16, 2020 had killed five people, injured one, buried two houses and damaged eight more.

Other landslides that have occurred in the district include one at Melamchi Bazar on August 3, 2020 had killed nine workers and buried a house. Another at Baruwa of Thampal Rural Municipality on August 3 had killed two and damaged five houses. Similarly, 32 houses were affected by the landslide in Thumpakhar of Sunkoshi Rural Municipality on August 30. Another landslide at Barhabise Municipality on August 30, 2020, had killed 17, injured nine, buried 14 people and swept away 27 houses.

The land at all locations mentioned above have deep fractures and are still fragile. However, people continue to live in those areas for lack of proper management of the people who were affected.

C. Floods

The district has also been affected by floods frequently. A flood in Bhotekoshi on July 5, 2016 had caused major damage to physical property, swept away three people and damaged different sections of the Kodari Highway to Nepal's border with China. After three months of opening of Nepal-China border, floods swept away the road from Barhabise to Liping. It had also swept away 98 houses and damaged 945 houses². The flooding resulted from a number natural factors, and were exacerbated by human-made factors such as haphazard construction of infrastructure and unscientific road construction. Another reason for the large loss of live and property is the unsatisfactory preparedness for such disasters at both the local and policy levels.

Damages Caused by the Lidi Landslide

Thirty-five people lost their life, two were buried, and six were injured in the landslide of Lidi, Jugal Rural Municipality-2 on August 14, 2020. The landslide buried 29 houses and 127 houses were damaged. Affected families were relocated to Baskharka of Selang, where they were staying when this report was prepared.

The school at Lidi was also buried by the landslide, which affected the education of 234 children who were studying there. Seventeen children had died in the landslide and two were injured. Further, seven children lost their parents in the landslide and the health post was also shut down after the disaster.

Resettlement to safe locations is a major concern for the residents of areas affected by landslides in the district. However, unable to access suitable land elsewhere many of those who were temporarily displaced by the disasters have returned to their origins and have begun rebuilding their houses, which has exposed them to high risk.

The mismanagement of support to the victims is another issue. Support of NRs. 12.4 million collected for the relief of victims of the Jure landslide of August 2, 2014 remained to be handed over. This was largely because of dispute among political parties over how the relief fund should be operated. There was discussion between local representatives, Chief District Officer and other stakeholders on its distribution, which was eventually put on a hold reportedly upon orders of the Ministry of Home Affairs³.

Damage to Livelihoods

Most of the people at Lidi are engaged in agriculture. All the 175 families there depended on the production of maize, millet, potato and rice. The landslide of Lidi damaged maize, millet and potato in 63.99 hectares of land and paddy in 85.72 hectares. After the landslide the residents of Lidi have been forced to live temporarily at Baskharka of Jugal Rural Municipality and were worried about their crops back in Lidi. The landslide had also damaged all 35 toilets and seven public taps that the families there had been using⁴.

Relocation of Settlements

The high casualties have resulted largely because people have continued to live in the high-risk areas. Many people have continued to live there because they have no place else to go and also because there have been no efforts by government to assist their transfer to safer locations. Further, some have stayed back because of cultural reasons and other attachments. In many areas locals have been continuously asking for assistance to move elsewhere. These include about people from about 500 households at Lampha, Sanchagaun, Lidi, Jhulke, and Nimlung. Experts have also recommended the relocation of settlements like Lidi. The government declared Sindhupalchok as disaster prone region and sent a team of experts to study the vulnerability of the settlements there on December 2. The team from the National Reconstruction Authority and the National Disaster Risk Reduction and Management Center have submitted a report to the government with recommendations. The report said two out of the four settlements studied were at high risk to landslides. The report said that both Lidi and Nampha were unfit for settlement.

The affected families of Lidi have been moved to Baskharka after the landslide, which experts have said is safe. Those who were moved there said they would like to live here but have asked government for support for building the required infrastructure.

Recommendations

The following recommendations have been made based on the analysis above:

- Prioritize risk-assessment and relocation of people living in areas that are at high risk to disasters, particularly landslides.
- Ensure sharing of authority for supporting disaster victims between all three tiers of government, and coordinate actions undertaken by the different levels.
- Establish relief centers and pre-position relief supplies near locations that are at very high risk from floods and landslides

Chapter 3

3.4 Problems and Challenges of Sugarcane Farmers

Background

Due to the geography, soil quality, irrigation accessibility, and favorable weather, the lower Terai region is the hub for Nepal's agricultural production. The production of various cash and food crops in the region, is also Nepal's agricultural backbone.

According to the Prospect and Challenges of Sugarcane Development in Nepal: Production, Market and Policy (Amita Pandey and Sudip Devkota-2020) Nepali sugarcane production contributes less than one percent to the production of SAARC countries, and Nepal ranks 41st among the sugar producing countries in the world. Sugarcane is a major cash crop in Nepal and it contributes 2.1 percent of the Agriculture Gross Domestic Product (AGDP). Despite its position in relation to the hectare it covers, Nepal lies in the 41st position among others in terms of the volume of production. Nepal produces 0.16 percent of the total sugarcane in the world.

Proper care to the sugarcane crop can lead to good harvests for at least three years after plantation and this can result in sizeable earning for farmers. Further, sugarcane can be grown also on land not suited for other crops, which is also advantageous to people with lands not good for other crops. Sugarcane farming is done in 15 districts of Nepal's Terai (plains).

Some of the major problems faced by Nepal's sugarcane farmers are lack of technical knowledge on farming and lack of consultation mechanisms, agricultural loans, lack of access in policy re/formation agendas and process, untimely and irregular payments from the sugar mills, difficulties in receiving governmental subsidy on time, and inability to increase sugarcane yield.

The sugarcane farmers from the plains have organized two protests in Kathmandu within a year and the main demand was that they be paid the money that sugar mills owed them. The farmers had organized the protest in December 2019 and returned after assurance of payment by the government. The farmers then postponed the protest after the sugar mill owners also assured them that they would be paid. The payments outstanding in December 2019 added up to NRs. 1.40 billion and following some payments had come down to NRs. 650 million in December 2020. Some banks had also issued notice of auction of collateral land that the farmers had provided for loans after they were not repaid. This article discusses sugarcane cultivation and the issues faced by farmers in Kapilvastu and Nawalparasi (West) districts, which are similar to those faced by sugarcane growers across Nepal.

Agriculture is the main source of household income in West Nawalparasi and Kapilbastu districts of Lumbini Province. According to the statistics of Food and Agriculture Organization Corporate 2018, sugarcane is grown on 71,466 hectares of land in Nepal and the production is about 3.23 million tons of sugarcane each year, making it a major cash crop.¹ In West Nawalparasi, sugarcane is grown in about 5,100 hectares of the total 25,955 hectares of cultivatable land in the district. In Kapilbastu District about 4,000 farmers were engaged in sugarcane farming. There are three sugar mills and 117 crossers in district – Lumbini Sugar Mill, Indira Sugar Mill, and Bagmati Sugar Mill. About 4000 farmers of Shivaraj Municipality and Krishnanagar Municipality of Constituency No. 3 were involved in sugarcane production.

About five years ago, the Mahalaxmi Sugar Mill in the district purchased cane from about 8,000 growers in about 8,000-9,000 hectare of land. But after the mill started periodic closure every year since 2015, the number of growers decreased to 4000 and the area under cultivation was also reduced to 1,400 hectares. The major problems faced by the sugarcane growers in the district were:

- Delayed payments by industries to the farmers
- Lack of adequate agricultural workers, and
- Inability of the government to ensure that cane growers were paid for cane on time.

Objectives

The objectives of this article are,

- To identify problems faced by farmers engaged in sugarcane farming, and
- To understand the demand of farmers and the outstanding payments due to them.

Research Methods

The study used a number of tools to collect information for this report. These included field observations, interviews, consultations with farmers, review of relevant reports, including relevant laws and agreements and reports published in the media.

The study was limited to five rural municipalities of Susta, Pratappur, Sarawal, Palhinandan, and Ramgram of West Nawalparasi; and Krishnanagar Municipality and Shivaraj Municipality as well as Bahadurganj of Krishnanagar, and Jawahari, Chanai, Shivapur and Birpur of Krishnanagar Municipality in Kapilvastu district. The study focused on the problems faced by farmers who were not paid for their product. The study's respondents included owners of sugar mills, cane growers, as well as struggle committees formed by farmers to demand payment from mill owners.

Problems Faced by Cane Growers

West Nawalparasi is an area known for its sugar cane production. It was grown in 5500 hectares of about 25,955 hectares of cultivable land. Until not long ago, about 7,000 hectares of land was used for growing sugarcane, but that has decreased – perhaps – reflecting the problems faced by the farmers. Generally, Nepal's production and supply of sugarcane is lower than the crushing capacity of mills. The seasonal and lower supply of cane has led the sugar mills to operate for a short crushing periods of around four to seven months a year.² According to the District Committee of the sugarcane farmers, the main reason for the lower supply compared to demand by mills is the delayed or no payment to the farmers from the sugar mills. This had led to other problems such as not being able to repay loans taken from the banks, which then led to the banks auctioning the collateral.

The farmers there were yet to receive NRs. 183.4 million in outstanding payment from the three sugar mills in the district. Umesh Kumar Yadav, Chairperson of District Sugarcane Producers' Organization, said the outstanding amount to farmers at the Sunwal Sugarcane Mill was NRs. 100 million, Indira Sugarcane Mill NRs. 80 million, and Bagmati Sugarcane Mill, NRs. 3.4 million.

Binod Kalwar, a cane grower at Pratapapur-8 said he had promised his money lender an interest of five percent each month but because he was unable to pay, the person has now begun growing crops on his land. My payment has been due for three years and now, the land (collateral) could be auctioned. Another cane grower from Susta-5 said, "We were forced to quit sugarcane farming and go for other crops because we have not received payment for three years. Wherever we go, we need to borrow money on interest, we are afraid we have to face the same problems with other crops also."

The Lumbini Sugar Mill of Sunwal owed NRs. 100 million to the farmers. The mill was closed at the time of the study. Jorsingh Majhi, the Assistant District Administrator, said that the mill owners had been out of contact for about 15 months. Durga Chaturvedi, Chief of the Sales Management Section of Indira Sugar Mills, said "Farmers are disappointed because they have not been paid, our problem is the inability to sell sugar in the market which is why we have not been able to pay." There are also some disputed payments. In the case of Indira Sugar Mill the farmers said it had not paid NRs.80 million, which the mill said was around NRs. 50 million.

The farmers who had not been paid the outstanding amounts faced additional troubles because they had not received any subsidy from the government.

According to the District Administration Office, NRs. 49 million sent to the district in 2018/19 (2076 BS) as subsidy had remained unspent in the account of the District Office of the Financial Comptroller. The District Sugarcane Production Organization members said this amount has remained at the office because of the difficult legal procedure involved in receiving payments. According to Umesh Kumar Yadav, the Chairperson of District Sugarcane Producers' Organization, even the government has been delaying in providing the subsidy to the farmers. The farmers had not received the subsidy earmarked for payment in 2019.

Likewise, in Kapilbastu, even though sugarcane is a major produce and there are sugar mills, crushers, and juice makers who buy cane locally the farmers were deprived of getting good value after the Mahalaxmi Sugar Mill shifted the factory. This mill itself had not paid farmers NRs. 70 million before it moved, and 8000 farmers there had not received the government subsidy of NRs. 25 per quintal of produce. This was supposed to have been provided in 2015/16 (2071/72 BS).

The farmers said they had not received payment for the sugarcane from the mill owners since 2015. These farmers from Nawalparasi, and Kapilbastu and other parts of the country first came to Kathmandu to demand their payments in December 2019. Many feared that the banks could move in an auction the collateral to recover their loans and that would leave them with nothing.

The protests in Kathmandu culminated in an agreement between the government and farmers on January 3, 2020 that said the payments would begin within January 21, 2020. Thereafter the farmers postponed their protest. The agreement was signed by Hareshyam Raya, Secretary of the protesting sugarcane growers, and Dinesh Bhattarai, Joint Secretary, Government of Nepal in the presence of the Minister for Industry, Commerce and Supply, Lekh Raj Bhatta. In the agreement the parties had agreed that the ministry would coordinate for ensuring the payments, form a task force to resolve the problem, to undertake studies to make the subsidy effective and the farmers agreed to postpone their protest, among others.

The COVID-19 pandemic added to the woes of the sugarcane farmers as they could not even find work as wage laborers. The non-payment by the sugar mills has even forced many to consider stopping cane growing altogether, and some have already begun shifting to growing bananas and vegetables.

At most a year after the agreement, with government the farmers of Province 2 had not received payments for their produce, who gathered again in Kathmandu to press for the payments. This round of protests at Maitighar began on December 10, 2020. Their complaints were also the same – they had not received payments since 2015 that had added up to NRs 1.2 billion (mill owners said this was NRs 656 million) they also accused the mill owners of delaying payment because they could get away with it. Following a decision at the Ministry of Home Affairs, on December 15, 2020 the government issued an order to District Administration Office to arrest mill owners who had not paid the farmers.

Government of Nepal provides subsidies on chemical and organic fertilizers, machinery, and insurance and also fixes the purchase price of sugarcane. Despite these facilities, the cost of sugarcane cultivation is still on the high side in Nepal (NRs 469/quintal). More than half of the cost of production goes to paying by labor. Other costs are that of chemical fertilizers, manure and land preparation.³ The government agreed to provide “incentive subsidy” for cane production, which the farmers had not yet received.

The 2020 agreement with farmers said that the government will provide NRs. 65.28 per quintal as the subsidy amount. The Ministry of Home Affairs agreed to draw the attention of the Ministry of Agriculture and Livestock Development and the Ministry of Finance regarding the issue. Similarly, the government also designated the Department of Commerce and Supply Management as contact point for addressing the problem regarding the payment to farmers and mediate between the sugar mill owners and the farmers. After this, on December 18, 2020, the government asked the farmers to stop their protest.

National and International Laws on the Rights of Farmers and Laborers

The definition (b) of Food Rights and Food Sovereignty Act (1999) has defined a “farmer” being a citizen engaged in agriculture as the major profession and lives entirely through the vocation. It also includes family member’s dependent of that citizen or a person who is engaged in agricultural activities for more than six months or a citizen who is engaged in making agricultural tools and the family member of that citizen.

Likewise, in definition (c) of the same Act has defined “agricultural land” as land for farming or land used for agricultural production or land allocated for agriculture in accordance with the existing laws.

According to the United Nations Guiding Principles of Occupation and Human Rights (2011), state should be responsible for the respect, protection, and maintenance of occupational human rights as they are provisioned. In the case of cane growers, it is evident that Government of Nepal has not everything possible for protecting their rights. The Subsidy Providing Procedure to Sugarcane Farmers (2018) and its amendment of 2019 requires a sugarcane farmer to submit a document of evidence that clearly states the area of land under the crop along with the evidence of the quantity of sale as provisioned in Section 5 (9) (a). The section 9 (b) of the same article says that the farmer who has used others land on lease has to submit the letter of contract that clearly mentions the plot number and the area of land. In case the farmer cannot produce the documents as provisioned in above mentioned Article and sections, section 9 (c) of the same article states that the farmer has to submit the recommendation letter from the local level government along with the evidence of plot number, area, and the quantity of production. The provision also says its account should be maintained separately.

According to the Article 25 (1) related to the Fundamental Rights in the Constitution of Nepal (2015), every citizen has the right to earn property, use it, sell it, make profit from business, and engage in transactions of other properties under the existing laws. In the case of the cane growers there are complications in the ability of farmers to enjoy the provisions in the Article above, in addition to being exploited by sugar mills. There are also questions on the effectiveness of the Government in assuring farmers their rights.

Conclusion

Nepal is still an agriculture-based country but the incomes of farmers have been decreasing despite the modern ways of farming. One reason is the lack of adequate knowledge about the new methods and technologies. Sugar cane growing can become a good source of income for farmers if provided access to use technology and fair market relation. The production of sugarcane in Nawalparasi alone could contribute towards reducing sugar imports. However, this has not happened; more and more people were moving from cane growing farming because of the delay or no payment by sugar mill owners. The non-payment has deprived farmers of their economic and professional rights. Therefore the responsibility of the Government to ensure that all outstanding payments are made. Also important is assuring farmers of timely payments in the future.

Recommendations

The following recommendations have emerged from the study. Firstly, it is important that the Government make substantial efforts to ensure that the outstanding payments to farmers are cleared by mill owners. Similarly, the Government should fix the price of sugarcane before the harvest and dispatch of the produce for processing. In the longer term, it would be important for providing technical advice and trainings to farmers to improve farming methods, alongside support to increasing irrigation and making available other inputs such as fertilizers, subsidies, and low-interest loans, on time. Support for increasing production by expanding irrigation and by providing chemical and organic fertilizers in time are other considerations. In addition to the above, the Government should investigate the allegations against sugar mill owners and provide necessary redress to farmers.

Chapter 3

3.5 Child Marriage and Violations of Child Rights in Karnali Province

Background

Marriage is a legal, religious, and cultural practice for establishing social relationship between two persons. Paragraph 11 of Civil Criminal Code 2017 has specified 20 years as the marriageable age and marriages before the attainment of the age is illegal and punishable.

The Constitution of Nepal has recognized child marriage as violation of Child Rights. The Human Rights Watch in 2016 said 37 percent girls marry before 18 years of age in Nepal, which had been covered in a newscast by BBC Nepali Service. The Government's strategy against child marriage says that Nepal lies behind only India and Bangladesh among nations with highest number of child marriages. Similarly, another report by UNICEF (2017) said that 40 percent Nepali girls marry before their 18th birthday and seven percent before they turn 15 years. The reasons that lead to child marriage are gender discrimination, poverty, illiteracy, and insecurity, among others.

Nepal is among the 16 countries with the highest number of child marriages in the world. And more girls in Nepal are married before age compared to boys. The Population and Health Survey of Nepal, 2011, has shown that 41 percent of girls between 20 and 24 years of age were married. At the same time, according to UNICEF (2017), one in every 10 boys of marry before 18 years of age. Child marriage deprives children of their basic rights and also from making decisions for aligning their path for future.

Rates of child marriage in Nepal vary by regions, settlement, economic and social status, ethnicity, religion and community and settlements. According to the UN Fund for Population, 43 percent girls from rural areas and 27 percent from urban areas marry before they turn 18. The data further revealed that the age of marriage of school going girls was 22 years and that for girls not going to school was 17 years. Likewise, girls with poor economic conditions married two years earlier than others. Reports and studies have demonstrated that child marriage prevalence is high in Karnali Province.

Problems Resulting from Child Marriage

Children marrying before the age of 20 are deprived of education and the opportunities to engage in economic activities once they are entrusted with responsibilities that come with marriage. Child marriage affects the development of capacities for personal growth and lack of ability and missed opportunities traps such persons in a vicious cycle of challenges. Human Rights Watch said children are deprived of right to education due to early marriage and early marriage leads to premature pregnancy, which can be life threatening to both mother and child.

INSEC’s Human Rights Yearbooks and the report of UNICEF have reported on the increase of sexual violence against children and particularly on those who marry early. Early marriage contributes to increase in poverty and other problems like the trafficking of girls, divorce, and violence against women. Analysis of divorce cases at the district courts shows the majority of those seeking divorce were under 25 years of age. Likewise, the report of Health Service Department in Salyan District showed that 25 percent of maternity admissions were girls under the age of 20 years.

Objectives

The objectives of this article are,

- To analyze the status child marriage in Salyan district and disseminate the information with the stakeholders.
- To strengthen the collaboration of human rights organizations for ending child marriage.

Research Methods

The writer reviewed commitments, strategies, laws, and previous studies of the Government as part of the research for this article. Discussions on data on child marriage were done with stakeholders in Salyan District of Karnali Province. The participants included representatives of different organizations and political parties. The study has used data of the Health Service Department of Salyan, the District Police Office, provincial police, and the District Court of Salyan in the analysis. The researcher also consulted various publications on child marriage published nationally and at the international level. The study has also incorporated the views from the interviews, group discussions, and meetings with different stakeholders in Salyan district.

Status of Child Marriage in Karnali Province

According to the 2011 census, 52 percent of girls in the Karnali region married before the age of 18 years. Most of the child marriages took place in Rukum Paschim with 71 percent and the least number in Dolpa District (50%). The census reported the following data on child marriage in the districts in the Karnali Province: Salyan and Jumla 70 percent each, Dailekh 71 percent, Jajarkot 66 percent, Kalikot 59 percent, Mugu 57 percent and Humla 52 percent.

Child marriage remains as the major child protection issue in Karnali Province. Different Government and non-government organizations (NGOs) have been working to reduce child marriages in the region. However, there has been no major decrease in the number of child marriages. Earlier, parents were the cause for early marriage as they wanted to marry off their children. This has changed and today, more and more children have begun opting for marriage, without consent of parents.

The Criminal Procedure (Code) Act, 2074 (2017), (Section 173), sub-section 1 has specified 20 years as the marriageable age but Nepal has cases of marriage even before the age of 10 years. Child marriage is most prevalent for children between ages of 15-19 years.

The highest percentage of child marriage was in age group 15-19 years, in Salyan District (62.88%). Overall Dailekh and Jumla had the highest percentage of child marriage in 2011.

Status of Child Marriage in Salyan

Remote parts of Salyan District have high prevalence of child marriage. Even though no official data on child marriage in the District is available, data of maternity, polygamy, divorce and complaints at the Police office reveal a high number of child marriage.

According to data at Salyan District Hospital, it had provided maternity services to 777 women between April 2020 and November 2020 and among them, 192 (25%) girls were below the age of 20 years. Six girls unable to have a normal delivery and had to be operated. Similarly, there were other complications the position of the child in seven cases, three had excessive bleeding, two had respiratory issues, and in one case the baby had died in the mother's womb.

Child marriage is illegal and it takes time before the cases reach court. Many such cases reach court seeking divorce and complaints about polygamy only when the girls reach 20 years of age or more. Among cases registered for divorce at the District Court in 2019/20, there were women below the age of 25 years in 39 of the 102 cases. Majority of them had married when they were underage. Further, there were nine cases of child marriage registered in the court in 2019/20. In most of these cases, the couple had married without the consent of the parents.

Another indication of the high prevalence were stickers that the Salyan Police Office had posted on the houses of people with messages against child marriages. The messages sought collaboration of local people to address the problem and had contact numbers of all local bodies, ambulance, administration, and judicial agencies that could be contacted to report about such marriages. The police said the campaign had been successful. INSEC documentation also showed that police had investigated 23 people in relation to five cases of child marriage, and had prevented 10 such marriages from taking place.

Impact of Child Marriage

Child marriage can have a permanent effects and sometimes even result in lasting psychological problems. In cases where parents have prevented or annulled the marriage those concerned develop feelings of inferiority and unacceptance. Some may even begin looking at marriage as a problem and in some case even resort to violent acts. There are both short- and long-term impacts of child marriage. The immediate impacts of child marriage are,

- Possibility of physical and mental disorder.
- Possibility of divorce at an early age.
- Loss of rights to health and education.
- Risk of death of mother and child during pregnancy and
- Deprivation of proper physical and mental development.

Similarly, the longer-term impacts are financial problems including the inability to run the family, effects on reproductive health, deprivation of education, likelihood of domestic violence and associated problems.

Social and Family Reunions

Nepali law does not recognize marriage of couples below 20 years of age. There is need for psychosocial counselling in the cases of child marriage. There were no mechanisms for counselling underage couples and children in general in Salyan District. The counselling should be done separately for those minors trying to get married or parents who force for child

Case 1

A 21 years old girl of Triveni Rural Municipality-5 of Salyan had married on April 18, 2015 at the age of 16 to an 18-year-old boy of Sharada Municipality-7 as they loved each other. However, they had not reached an age where they could take decisions themselves and as result the marriage caused them to stop studies. They had a 2-year-old child in 2020. The halted study, daily household work, and increased responsibility of parenting soon began affecting their relationship. The resulting domestic disputes and violence caused the girl to file for a divorce. The case was registered at the District Court, Salyan on September 1, 2020. She was 21 years old at the time. The divorce was approved and the girl now lives with her mother who is staying with her parents.

Case 2

There is a police check point at the entry to Shital Bajar of Kapurkot Rural Municipality-5 of Salyan. The police stopped a vehicle (Bhe 1 Ja 384) for a regular check on July 27, 2020 and discovered that it carried people participating in a wedding of a minor.

marriage on difficulties in life and legal consequences that could occur due to child marriage and ways to resolve them. Forceful separation of couples based on law and tradition should be avoided and instead, they could be convinced about the problems they could face if the marriage was not annulled. After counselling and creating an environment for them to pursue education they could be convinced to marry when they reach marriageable age. One way to do this is to assure them of parental consent for marriage when they attain the right age.

Constitution, Laws and Status of Enforcement

National policy on children, 2069 has identified child marriage as a barrier to child rights. Strategy 8.9 of the policy advocates engaging government bodies and aid agencies at community level for the reduction of child marriage, to effectively file and take action on cases of child marriage, and also provide this responsibility to the local bodies. Similarly, strategy 9.3 advocate's local awareness programs combat both child trafficking and child marriage. The implementation of such policies and constitutional guarantees is not ensured properly in Salyan district. Because of the gap in implementation of the law and policies and less engagement of the stakeholders in preventing child marriage, the problem is spreading in the recent years too.

Conclusion

The situation of child marriage in Salyan District is alarming. Yet there was a lack of coordination between federal, provincial, and local government agencies for addressing the problem of child marriage. There were also indications that the different programs for ensuring the law enforcement to reduce the child marriage is not effective and had not been adequate for addressing the problem. Further, there had been little change in traditional cultures and social group specific beliefs regarding child marriage. The local governments lacked effective strategies against child marriage.

Recommendations

There is need for a nationwide campaign against child marriage in partnership with all agencies working on human rights, child rights, women's empowerment and government agencies. Ending child marriage would require cooperation at different levels starting with families, and communities. Another approach to ending child marriage would be strict local vigilance and commitments of local bodies to tackle the problem, aided by an appropriate strategy against child marriage.

Chapter 3

3.6 Socio-economic Situation of Citizens Returned from India Due to COVID-19

Background

The first case of COVID-19 in Nepal was detected in a person who had returned from China on January 23, 2020. The infections then soared. According to the Ministry of Health and Population, the total infections had reached 260,593 and the number of deaths 1,856 at the end of 2020. The first infection in Sudurpaschim was detected on March 27, 2020 and the number rose to 14,329 infections and 60 deaths at year end. The Government of Nepal declared lockdown for controlling the spread of COVID-19 infections from March 24, 2020, a few days after India had declared its lockdown. The lockdown in India forced thousands of Nepali to return home and arrived at Nepal-India border, where they were refused entry in violation of existing laws, and the economic, social, and cultural rights assured by the Constitution of Nepal.

People of Sudurpaschim Province have traditionally gone to India in search of work. This practice even predates the Sugauli Treaty, signed between Nepal and the then East India Company in December 2, 1815. After the treaty, Nepalis had begun moving to Burma, Bhutan, India, Bangladesh, Thailand, and Tibet Autonomous Region of China for work. According to a publication of the National Human Rights Commission, Nepali migrant workers are spread across 108 nations of the world.

The Foreign Employment Act 2007 aims to promote and make foreign employment more secured and ethical, and to protect of rights of workers and employment professionals. Similarly, another law on the Right to Work 2018, has the provision to assure right to employment, and choose professions. For its realization, the Act is made and has provided provisions for selecting profession, right of employment and assistance to the unemployed to find jobs. The Act says that all three tiers of Government would conduct employment programs and provide minimum possible employment to the unemployed.

Realizing the vulnerability of rights of migrant workers and their families around the world, General Assembly of United Nations approved the International Treaty for Protection of Rights of Migrant Workers and their Families on December 15, 1990. Part 1, section 2(1) of the treaty, defines migrant workers as people involved in work in nations of which they are not nationals. The subsection 2(a) of section 2 of the treaty defines border region workers as those who can move to and from their work station to their permanent residence on weekly basis or daily basis.

According to a booklet published by National Human Rights Commission in 2013 on rights of migrant workers shows 1.5-2 million migrant Nepali workers in India. As per the then Central Child Welfare Committee of the Ministry of Women, Children and Senior Citizens, between July 3 to October 3, 2004, the number of minors moving to India was 4,360 from Mahendranagar, 1,950 from Dhangadi, 1,243 from Tikapur, 6,404 from Nepalgunj and 6,324 from Bhairahawa.

After the COVID-19 outbreak in India, many Nepal lost their jobs and were forced to head back to Nepal. According to the Ministry of Internal Affairs and Law, Nepal, 237,490 migrant workers of Sudurpaschim Province returned to Nepal after the outbreak. The lockdown and the closure of border entry points by the Government caused these returnees to be held up at the border causing many of them to head back to India to their jobs despite the danger of infection.

It is the responsibility of state to protect, promote and ensure people their rights, which the Government of Nepal unable to uphold. None of the national and international laws made for protect their rights could be enforced to support the workers. In the case of Nepal, even the law on migrant workers was inadequate to include migrant workers in India.

Objectives

The study had the following objectives:

- To study the work situation of returnee workers of Sudurpaschim Province and identify the difficulties they faced.
- To understand the effectiveness of policy and practical efforts of Government to promote self-employment of workers who had returned from India.
- To make recommendations to all three tiers of Government for addressing problems of migrant workers who had returned from India.

Research Methods

The study is based on interviews and group discussions with returnee migrant workers, families who had their members working in India, different organizations working to support migrant workers, representatives of local and provincial Government agencies, security agencies, political parties, lawyers, and experts. The study has also reviewed and analyzed different news items, articles, research reports, and Government documents. The study essentially is limited to understanding and analyzing the problems faced by returnee migrant workers of Sudurpaschim Province from India and the implementation of commitments made by the Nepali state and Government during the pandemic.

Nature of Work of Nepali Migrant Workers in India

The poverty of Sudurpaschim Province as per the census of 2001 was 44.6 percent and it had reached 47.1 percent in 2011. The recent poverty data show the prevalence at 33.56 percent. This poverty fuels the practice of going to India in all nine districts in the province. People from hills and mountains go to India to work for both short- and long durations. They mostly go to Himanchal Pradesh in India where they are mostly employed as farm workers in apple farms and porters for devotees visiting Badrinath and Amarnath temples. The migrant workers are engaged as carpenters in Laddakh. They are generally involved in low-income jobs at dhawas (eateries), restaurants, canteens, as household help and security guards. Migrants Union's data show that 10 percent were in formal employment and seven percent owned property in both Nepal and India. As per the Union, there are three types of Nepali migrant workers in India.

First: Manual laborers, security guards, household help, and workers working on daily wage.

Second: Workers with ration card and property both in Nepal and India; this category was less affected by COVID-19.

Third: Those who are working as formal employees in government services and in industries.

Data on Migrant Workers

According to the Ministry of Law and Internal Affairs of the Province, 350,963 migrant workers had returned from India after the COVID-19 outbreak. However, most local bodies did not have exact records of returnee migrant workers. The Kailali District Administration Office had records of 46,729 migrant workers who had entered Kailali but it did not have records of workers who had returned after losing their jobs. Similarly, the records of the District Health Office, Achham, had records of 3,467 women, 13,676 men, 1,021 children, 93 pregnant women, and 201 senior citizens who had returned after the COVID-19 outbreak. Likewise, 24,926 migrant workers had returned to Kanchanpur and 51,996 workers left for India through Kanchanpur.

Issues Faced by Migrant Workers

The main issue of Nepali migrant workers in India was the absence of records. This could be largely because the Foreign Employment Act, 2064 does not consider workers going to India as migrant workers. Therefore, the law needs to be amended to include records of those Nepali working in India, which would also require setting up administrative units for the purpose at the borders. Further, there was no information on any initiative from the Nepali government for searching people who had gone to India but were no longer in contact with their families.

Media reports has presented that the migrant workers retuning to Nepal have often been victims of crime like pick-pocketing, robbery, sexual abuses, killing, poisoning and so on. Some of these issues begin at the border and suggests the need for collaboration of security agencies of two countries to ensure safe border passage. Similarly, the Government of Nepal also needs to formalize the largely informal work arrangement and make provisions for insurance and workers relief fund, similar to what exists for Nepali workers working in third countries.

Effectiveness of Programs against COVID-19 and Those for Returnee Migrants

Sudurpaschim Province had allocated NRs. 150 million for a self-employment program for citizens affected by COVID-19. The Ministry of Land Arrangement, Agriculture and Co-Operatives of Sudurpaschim Province had made arrangements for providing grant amounts of NRs. 60,000 for cow and buffalo farming, NRs. 40,000 for raising goats, pigs and poultry; and NRs. 30,000 for fish farming. There was also provision of providing grants of NRs. 30,000 for horticultural ture, mushroom farming, bee-keeping, floriculture, and nursery.

Even though many local bodies were unable to create the opportunities of employment, they had begun programs in collaboration with non-governmental organizations. Overall, even with this, the budgets allocated for generating employment remained largely ineffective.

Programs of the Ministry of Land Arrangement, Agriculture, and Co-Operatives

Generally, the ministry had not been able to deliver its promise of creating 5000 self-employed youth of returnees from abroad in the province. The youth were largely uninterested in the ministry's initiative and the program had not included the migrant workers from India. The main concern of the youth was that the money provided would not be enough for them to start enterprises.

The ministry had sought for applications for those interested in receiving the grants for animal husbandry and the Expert Service Centre of Kailali had provided a total grant of NRs. 187 million. The first phase grants were provided to 12,859 youth from all 13 local bodies of Kailali but only 441 applied in the second phase. The final name list of the grant recipients was not made public.

The Ministry said a budget of NRs. 63, 50,000 had been sent to the Agriculture Knowledge Centre at Dhangadi. In the first phase, 1,256 applicants filed the application for support but only 91 had been able to provide supporting documents. Among these 91 applications, 88 were shortlisted and therefore, the rest of the amount was sent back to the ministry. Again, migrant workers from India were not included in this program. In many cases, they could not be included because of their inability to provide supporting documents.

Programs of Local Bodies

Larger number of returnee migrant workers from India were living without work after their return, and many had problems of earning enough for their daily meals. As result, thousands began returning to India in search of work again. Some, local bodies in the province, however, had designed some programs to support them. Some of which are discussed below.

Bhimdatta Municipality of Kanchanpur has started an entrepreneurship program and has set up a fund of NRs. 20 million in collaboration with Nepal Bank Limited. According to Surendra Bista, Mayor, the program intends to provide loans without interest and collateral to those wanting to start their own enterprises, with a special focus on migrant workers returnees from India. The fund is to be operating after the Municipality deposits NRs. 10 million to the fund. The entrepreneurship program is to provide loans of NRs. 100,000 to NRs. 500,000 for a period of five years and the municipality has begun collecting data for the purpose.

Similarly, the Beldandi Rural Municipality has allocated a budget of NRs. 150 million under Prime Minister Employment Program and aims to generate employment for 400 youth, including 200 returnee migrant workers. The rural municipality had also allocated NRs. 1.5 million for skill enhancement programs. However, the programs for self-employment of youth was largely ineffective due to lack of interest from the youth, according to Dhan Bahadur Thapa, Chairperson of the rural municipality. The chairperson of Ward No. 2 Prem Raj Khatri added that people were interested only in grants and relief programs not in self-employment programs.

Case Studies

Migrant workers from Bajura working in different cities of India were affected by COVID-19 pandemic and 8,450 workers had returned home. At home they faced the problem of scarcity of food and affected those who had returned from India. The following are brief profiles of some of the returnees.

Dharma Sarki of Triveni Municipality-8, Jhlagau, who had been working in India for last 20 years had never thought the situation would be so bad that he would have to come back to Nepal. COVID-19 caused him to head home because his employment was temporarily stopped. He does not own land nor has a house in his village and therefore has had to depend on others. He had sold his land in the village 10 years ago. Upon return he stayed in quarantine for 16 days and then with his family in the village. He faced the problem of managing meals for himself and his dependents and not received any support from the local government. He said he feared he could lose life because of hunger than the disease.

Ambika Karki of Budhiganga Municipality-2, Kolti, had been working in India and returned to his village with his six family members after the COVID-19 outbreak. Her husband had come to Nepal earlier than he had come earlier for the last rites of his mother and was heading back to India and had reached Nepalgunj on March 24, 2020. He was stranded in Nepalgunj owing to the nationwide lockdown imposed by Government of Nepal from the same day. His wife Ambika returned with the children and they were living on rent in Nepalgunj. Later, her husband died in an accident, and Ambika returned to Bajura and stayed in quarantine at the Jana Prakash Secondary School for 25 days. Ambika said she had received no help from the local government. She does not own property in the village and was staying at the house of a brother-in-law by relation. She has been seeking support for education and upbringing of her children.

Naule Nepali of Triveni Municipality-8, Kalapani, had been working in India 10 years and lost his job after the COVID-19 outbreak. He returned to Nepal with his family of seven in last week of April 2020. He was working as a security guard in India. His house in the village was damaged and therefore the entire family took shelter at his brother's home. They had no work and no money for food. His wife, Radhika was sick but had not received medical treatment and their six-month-old daughter appeared to be malnourished.

Kalamati Damai and her six member's family of Badimalika Municipality-2, Majhigau, had returned to Nepal after the COVID-19 outbreak. The family had been living there for 24 years. Her husband was sick. The family was in quarantine in Bajura where her husband committed suicide two days after they had arrived there. Kalamati has no property in the village and even could not even pay for the final rites of her husband. Even though the villagers and the ward office had helped her with the final rites, she faced the problem of raising her family of five.

cial and federal) were largely unable to reach the youth who had returned from India after the COVID-19 outbreak. This was reason why many began returning to India as soon as the border controls were lifted. The following are some representative cases of people who were headed back to India through different border points.

Gadda Chauki, Kanchanpur

Tula Giri of Lekam Rural Municipality-4, Darchula, said he was not happy about having to return to India for employment amidst the COVID-19 pandemic. "I came back to Nepal at the start of COVID-19 but I am going to India again after seven months because

I do not have a source of income here”. Similarly, Tej Dharmi of Sigas Rural Municipality, of Baitadi said he was leaving because there was no other way to raise his family in Nepal. Harak Singh Dharmi of Ghoda Ghodi Municipality-1 was also in the group heading to India from Gadda Chauki.

Gaurifanta, Kanchanpur and Kailali

Umakanta Ojha, 38, Karan Ojha, 31, and Ambadatta Ojha, 22, of Goriganga Municipality-9 Kailali were headed to India in search of work on November 3, 2020. They said they were leaving because they were not able to get work in Nepal and because their subsistence agriculture was not enough for raising their families. They had been working at hotels in Mumbai for about three years and were hopeful about getting their jobs back.

Similarly, Raju Lohar, 29, and Malika Lohar, 26, of Punarbas Municipality-9 Khagau had been working at a hotel in Chennai and had returned to Nepal in March 2020. They were also at the border waiting to cross over to India for work as they had not found employment in Nepal. The family of Bharat Bista, 25, of Naugad Rural Municipality-2, had been working in India for six years before he came back to Nepal earlier in 2020. Unable to find work in Nepal, the family of four, including his wife and two children – ages seven and seven months – was also headed to India.

Some youth who had returned from India had started potato farming in Ganyapdhura Rural Municipality-4, Bantol of Dadeldhura District. Dev Raj Bhatta, Jaya Raj Bhatta and Ishwor Dev Bhatta had started faming on 547,600 sq ft. that had been uncultivated for 30 years. They had planted 60 quintals of potatoes and two quintals of garlic, according to the ward chairperson of Ganyapdhura Rural Municipality-4. Daily, about 30 to 40 people worked in the field where 10 huts had been built for raising buffalo.

The researcher met various local stakeholders to get their views on the issues faced by the returnee migrant workers. According to Bishnu Awasthi, President, Federation of Nepali Journalists, Kanchanpur, the migrant workers had been terrorized by the provisions of quarantine, border controls, and failure of being able to find employment, and the inability of the Government to address the situation in a timely manner.

Similarly, according to Naresh Silal, President, NGO Federation Kanchanpur, a large number of migrant workers had been affected by the pandemic and many had faced problems at the border and at the quarantine centres. They returned to Nepal in the hope of doing something in the country itself but had to return when they did not find opportunities in Nepal. The local bodies had also largely failed to fulfill their promise of bringing self-employment programs for the returnees.

Junga Bahadur Malla, President, Chamber of Commerce, Kanchanpur added that the returnee migrant workers were forced to head back to India largely because of the inability of local bodies to provide them employment.

Conclusion

Even though there were provisions for income generating programs for the returnee migrant from provincial and local governments, the implementation of the programs was largely ineffective. The provincial government had setup a fund to support self-employment but collateral-free loans were not provided to migrants returning from India. The inability of the returnees to find productive employment forced them to head back to India to their old jobs or to find work there.

Recommendations

A major recommendation from this study is the need for amending the Foreign Employment Act, 2064 to include the migrant workers in India to ensure that their rights are to be protected. The non-recognition of migrant workers in India as migrant workers by the law had prevented the returnees from accessing the support programs initiated by the government. There were little or no records of Nepali working in India at the local governments. This must change to ensure that all Nepali are provided the social protections guaranteed by the Constitution in times of difficulties. This is another lesson that can be taken from the plight of returnee migrant workers from India after the COVID-19 outbreak.

Views of Political Parties on Human Rights Situation in 2020

Nepal Communist Party

1. Background

The year 2020 has remained difficult for the nation. Every sectors were disturbed and affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. The pandemic outbreak challenged the global power states and Nepal has also faced its threats. It was a challenge for the state to safeguard the human rights during the crisis. The human rights criteria of this year is measured by the difficulties faced by the citizens and roles of the Government in mediating to solve those challenges. Here, we discuss the role of Nepal Government lead by Communist Party of Nepal to safeguard the human rights of people with easy accesses to health, education, food, employment and security and other sectors.

2. Context of Covid and Nation's Human Rights

The country was bound to face three months of lockdown from March 24, 2020 to control the transmission of COVID-19. During that period, transportation, businesses, and all activities apart from fundamental requirement were halted. To manage the situation, the Government has formed High-Level Coordination Committee for the Prevention and Control of COVID-19 and set up important infrastructures in District, Province and local levels.

Nepal Government, Home Ministry has passed security criteria to organize the lockdown. Similarly, to organize the informal sectors, relief criteria were made and implemented. The Government through Ministry of Federal Affairs and General Administration has formed Crisis Management Information System (CMIS) to act as the bridge between federal and local level bodies.

The Government has conducted awareness programs for control and reduction of COVID-19 infection spread. It has also distributed relief packages to the workers working on daily wages, disables and helpless. Through the local governments, holding centres, isolations centres and quarantines were set up. Crisis management fund was set up and utilized.

3. Rights of Health

The situation of civil and political rights was normal in the country. Nationwide lockdown was enforced to keep the citizens safe from the pandemic of COVID-19. All the services apart from most important were all closed.

In the period of lockdown, the Government had setup quarantine in all local level governments and new comers from abroad were compulsorily kept in those quarantines for 14 days. The government established COVID-19 special hospitals, mobilized its machineries for contract tracing of the infected, and increased the limit of PCR test within this period. The Government arranged the free treatment of the infected persons. After the end of the lockdown, the effects of COVID-19 increased. This resulted in increase in number of infections. The infections could not get widespread with the increase in number of testing centres, number of PCR tests and arrangements for isolation.

The Government is focused on easy availability health kits and vaccines through Government to Government procurement procedure.

Within this period, the Government has inaugurated the construction of five to fifteen bedded 209 hospitals in local levels.

4. Rights to Food and Land

In Nepal, 35 out of 77 Districts remain as food unsecured Districts and 13 % people are food unsecured. For the food and nutrition security, the Government has been carrying out the tasks of using land unused before for cultivation and formulating land use policies. The Government is working for providing land to landless people forming high level commission even in the chaotic time of crisis of COVID-19. The Government aims to form the commission in all the Districts and work effectively.

5. Rights to Education

Educational institutions were shut down by the pandemic. SEE exam was halted before the start. There were complete shutdown of schools from March 23 to throughout 2020. Universities and schools started online education. The Government continued to work for conducting classes through alternative medium.

6. Rights to Movement

Transportation was shut down during lockdown. Migrant workers in India returned to their home. They were kept in quarantines in border by the mutual understanding between two nations. People in Kathmandu were bound to move back to their respective places out of valley. Many walked for weeks to reach their home. To end such situation, all three tiers of Governments cooperated and played crucial roles to take people to their respective places. Similarly, the Government facilitated to bring Nepalese from abroad and send foreigners to their respective countries.

7. Rights to Professions and Employment

Due to the basic protocols of public health, public transportation could not be operated due to pandemic. Industries were shut down, businesses were closed. Employment of daily waged workers, laborers in transportation sectors and families dependent upon them were affected. Government formed criteria and lists of those people for distribution of reliefs. This work of the Government was praiseworthy.

8. Child Rights and Women Rights

There was direct impact on child and women rights due to COVID-19. School enrollment campaign could not be carried out this year. Children could not go to schools. Even though many schools conducted online classes, those were out of access to the students of remote places. There were news of increment in cases of domestic violence, women violence, and sexual violence during the period of lockdown. The party was serious and sensitive to such situation. The party made efforts for health and psychological consultations to the communities affected by the loss due to COVID-19.

9. Rights against Racial Discrimination

There were cases of racial discrimination and inhuman behaviors in the Country. The inhuman killings of group of Nawa Raj BK in Rukum West happened this year. The Government published the report through the field studies forming parliamentary committee. NCP is determined to punish he convicts in such cases of inhuman natures.

10. Constitutional Commissions and Human Rights

The Constitutional Council recommend members for constitutional commissions which were vacant for long time. With this task, we can believe the constitutional commissions, National Human Rights Commission, National Women Commission, Madhesi Commission, Dalit Commission, Inclusion Commission would be more effective towards their goals.

At last,

NCP is committed to guarantee human rights, freedom of expression, rule of law and ending impunity. Citizens can realize the use of human rights only when there is peace and rule of law in the country. There must be preparedness to stay safe from disasters and pandemics. To realize the guarantee of services and rights to all the citizens, there must be plans of developments, special programs, enough budgets and address from the concerned communities. NCP believes person with disability, senior citizens, and discriminated social groups, and persons, people from remote places must get special attentions for realization of their human rights. Right of responsible life is important for all the citizens. The human rights can be realized only if life of every citizen is secured, construction of favourable environment for responsible life, effects of pandemics are reduced and works for controlling them in future are executed. Our party is seriously contributing for it.

Ishwor Bahadur Rijal
Secretary, Central Office

Nepali Congress

After the Communist Party of Nepal formed government through the general election, serious human rights violation cases continued in the year 2020. Excluding the human rights situation during the armed conflict period, the cases of human rights violation in this year are severe ever after the restoration of democracy in 1990. The Government has started direct interventions on judiciary and other constitutional bodies interfering the check and balance relation among the organs of the state. It has also terrorized media sector which has been considered as the watchdog of the state.

The Communist Government has implanted the feeling of fear and tried to confine the freedom of people bringing the law which provisioned five years of imprisonment and fine of NRs. 1.5 million even for simple trolling to someone in social media.

The Communist Government was unaware about the case of mysterious death of ward chairperson of Panchadeval Binayak Municipality – 2 of Achham, Padam Bahadur Dhama on February 3, 2020.

Even in Kathmandu, murder of wife of the former Secretary, Ambassador, two cases of killing after abduction of children, chained bomb explosions, and killing of two children in the name of two way clash have been proven as the deteriorated commitment of communist Government.

The registration of 434 cases of murders and 1,075 cases of rapes in fiscal year 2019/20 shows the poor situation of human rights. In the period of communist party lead government, the situation of peace and security is being declined which is the serious concern for human rights even in the phase of political stability.

In the peace rally on February 20, 2020, chairperson of the Nepal Students Union, Rajiv Dhungana, general secretary Urmila Thapaliya, Maheswor Kunwar, Yuvraj Pandey and student leaders Suraj Saijuwal, Hari Acharya, Dipak Rimal, Ramji Basnet, Sunil Pant, Tilak Batala, Ramit Khadka were injured. On the same day, in a peaceful protest at Tribhuvan International Airport, Rabinendra Rokaya, Rakesh Siwakoti, Bipin Budhathoki, Bishnu Hari Khadka, Anil Khanal, Gopi Bhandari, Bibek Upreti and dozens of students were injured. Arresting injured Bishnu Hari Khadka was against the fundamental rights as mentioned in the Constitution.

The government has been numb to the issues of availability of all requirements to fight against the impacts of COVID-19. There were various challenges like lack of safety measures, testing kits in National Public Health Lab. This made public intimidated with the psychology of infection. National prestige was defamed due to the irregularity in the purchase of health equipment required for fighting COVID-19. The cases of purchase of low quality goods not meeting the WHO guidelines is unforgivable. I request the respected Prime Minister to help in the investigation and punishment of those involved in the delay and irregularity. There was misuse of human rights when the member of parliament Mahesh Basnet, Kishan Shrestha and former IGP brought another member of parliament Dr. Surendra Kumar Yadav from Dhanusha in a way of abduction during lockdown.

There were quarantines in many places without specified criteria made by the Government. Quarantines were made in simple grounds without basic facilities and people were kept in crowd.

There was direct violation of human rights when four children, Bimala Khatri, Bijaya Khatri, Gaurab Khatri and Nokhiram Dangi were killed in an explosion in Rolpa on May 1, 2020. Such cases amid the freshness of war are heart shattering. Government is not serious to solve these issues left by the war.

The members of the Nepal Students Union along with its chairperson Rajiv Dhungana, Secretaries Prabhat Dahal, Urmila Thapaliya, Dipak Bhattarai, Baldev Timilsina, and Yuvraj Pandey were arrested while protesting to pressurize the Government to bring back encroached Nepali land. This is another example of human rights violation by the communist Government.

There was serious violation of human rights when Nawa Raj BK, Tikaram BK, Sanju BK, Ganesh Buda, Lokendra Sunar and Govnda Shahi were killed with the involvement of ward chairperson elected from Nepal Communist Party. The case occurred in Rukum West on May 23, 2020. The case has raised three questions; question on social discrimination and evil practice, question on the role of Government and question on situation of impunity. All three questions have exposed the commitments of Communist Government among people.

There was suspicious death of Shambhu Sada in the custody of Area Police Office of Sabaila in Sabaila Municipality-12 on June 10, 2020. There was inhuman cases of abuse, beating, and troubles to the government officials, Congress representatives, and members of security bodies by the order of Communist Government which shows the directed aristocracy of the Government.

The episodes of press council proves the efforts of the present Government towards confinement of freedom of press. The Government's intention of intervening in the activities of press council through media bill was seen.

The attention of Nepali Congress is drawn towards suspicious death of two youths under the control of Government in Morang and Rautahat. Bijaya Mahara, 19 of Rautahat in police custody died suspiciously in a hospital of Birgunj and Nirajan Yadav, 26 of Morang died in Koshi Hospital. Further, the death of Shambhu Sada in Dhanusha and murder of priest of a temple of Rautahat, Ram Sah proves the direct violation of human rights.

Similarly, there was violation of human rights when the cadres of Nepali Congress were used force when they were on their way to submit a report based on a local case in Gulmi on September 21, 2020.

Police denied to register the complaint for death of Mahendra Ram of Sarlahi. He died in clash with police during a peaceful protest. There was abuse of police to the protesters which prove the violation of human rights by the present Communist Government.

Even after two days of beating Bir Bahadur Bista, Chairperson of Sunarya Rural Municipality of Baitadi, the administration did not show interest to punish the accused which shows the biasness of the Government towards public.

There was a clash between two local groups of the ruling Communist Party in Parsa on September 2, 2020 in which a person was killed. The news of denial by police to register the case which caused delay in funeral of the dead body even after two days of death shows the violation of human rights.

The arrest of senior leader of Nepali Congress, Ram Chandra Paudel on his way to inaugurate the bridge joining ward number one with 11 of Vyas Municipality of Tanahun was the direct violation of human rights.

Nepali Congress demands the release of its member Dilli Bahadur Chand who was arrested in Nepalgunj and transferred to Kathmandu.

Thousands like Dilli Bahadur Chand shared their views against the ordinance issued for political party separation, abduction of Member of Parliament, and pressure to police for not filing cases. If it was illegal, there is National Civil Code Act to ensue punishment. But, he was arrested against all those procedures.

Chand, who was also an ex-police has been working as security guard in a private office. Nepali Congress demands the prompt release of Chand and for recommend the government to be cautious about such actions.

Krishna Prasad Paudel
Chief Secretary

The issue of human rights is critical and has often been problematic in developing country like Nepal. The year 2020 did not see much noteworthy progress on human rights issues. There have been many murders, violent acts and rape, to list a few. Further, the government did not take any major steps for the promotion and protection of human rights. There were many instances where security forces used excessive force on peaceful processions and protests including firing and injuring the protesters. The government is expected to take an impartial approach for ensuring human rights. However, the behavior and actions of the government suggest a partisan approach that has created a situation where those accused of violations have not been brought to justice while innocent citizens have been victimized. Further, with protection of the government those who are involved in anti-social unsocial activities have continued to operate are while the people in general have had to bear the brunt. Further still, innocent people have continued to be framed for false allegations and sentenced to prison. The general people will be able to realize their human rights only when security agencies prioritize the principles of human rights. The National Human Rights Commission has also not been able to fulfilling its responsibility as it has remained more or less ineffective.

Human rights can be fully realized only when there is political stability. The government led by KP Sharma Oli had promised voters of stability and had emerged with a two-third majority in the parliament. It has not only failed to assure human rights but has by dissolving the parliament pushed the country towards more instability and conflict. This could result in more difficult times to ensuring human rights.

Further, federalism is being implemented not as a political arrangement but as an administrative mechanism. It is necessary to institutionalize legal and constitutional provisions for establishment of social justice, ending all forms of discrimination, ensuring social justice and address the important issues related to the governance structure, election system, and state restructuring. Human rights will remain mere lip service until all are able to acquire and exercise equal rights. This is reason why the People's Socialist Party has been making demands on the need to amend the Constitution. Political stability cannot be ensured until the stability discriminatory articles are amended and identity-based federalism is established. There is danger that the human rights would become more challenging if the major political parties are not serious about our demands for amending the Constitution. We hope INSEC that has been working on human rights for a long time will continuously work for ending discrimination and establishing social justice and also congratulate it on the publication of Nepal Human Rights Year Book.

Views of Institutions on Human Rights Situation in 2020

National Human Rights Commission

Informal Sector Service Centre (INSEC) has made a commendable identity for itself in the human rights sector. Each year, the organization has been publishing the “Nepal Human Rights Year Book” that provides exposure of cases of human rights violation. The prosperity of society and people is possible only through respect of human rights. It is a matter of concern for all as every individual is responsible for upholding the rights. Where there is no respect to human rights, there is chaos and a civilized society cannot be imagined, without the development of the culture of human rights.

Nepal is member of UN and party to different international treaties on human rights. It is also an elected member state at the Human Rights Council. A nation can be fully democratic only if it can accept and uphold human rights. Governments are guardians in democratic nations elected by representatives of the people. This is what makes the Government responsible for respecting, protecting and abiding by human rights. Such responsibilities have national, regional and international implications. Governments, thus, must be made responsible if they stray from the responsibility of ensuring human rights of the people. The Nepal Human Rights Commission has had this responsibility since its establishment.

Nepal’s federal governance structure is now under implementation. The parliament has enacted various laws on fundamental rights Fifth National Plan on Human Rights is also being prepared following consultations with stakeholders.

Despite positive efforts, there are numerous challenges with respect to protection and implementation for ensuring human rights of all citizens. Political developments, particularly the dissolution of parliament in December 2020, points to the possibility instability in the country which can dampen progress made in the human rights front. The commitments of Government to conclude the transitional justice process remains work-in-progress and the victims have not yet received justice, even 14 years after the signing of the Comprehensive Peace Accord.

NHRC has been continuously working for ensuring respect, protection, promotion of human rights. Its work is guided by provisions in the Constitution of Nepal, 2015 [Article 249 (1) (2) (3)] and National Human Rights Commission Act, 2012. The organizational structure of Commission to align it to the federal system has not yet received approval by the Office of Prime Minister and Council of Ministers. The proposed amendment bill for amending the National Human Rights Commission Act, 2012 does not include the same levels of freedom and autonomy provided by the original law.

There is much to be improved in terms of the assurance of civil and political rights, economic, social and cultural rights and overall human rights of citizens. There still remain obstacles for people to fully enjoy fundamental human rights as guaranteed in the Constitution. Exploitation of laborers working abroad and increasing domestic violence are some serious concerns. The Government has largely been unable to focus on the rights of marginalized people, poor people, tribal communities, people with disability, Dalits, women, minorities and senior citizens. Consequently, the rights of these people remain to be secured.

The Commission has carried out a number of activities and programs for improving the situation of human rights in the present fiscal year. It received 132 complaints of human rights violations in the present fiscal year. The Commission has completed investigations on 795 cases, including old cases. It also followed up on 128 human rights issues. The commission conducted 112 programs, and 56 programs on collaboration with stakeholders, for the realization of its slogan, “Human rights for all at their doorstep: base for peace and development”. The Commission also participated in 30 programs as resource person. It also broadcast programs on radio in all the seven provinces, in 11 languages, on the health, security and citizen’s rights during COVID-19 lockdowns.

The Commission also organized an international conference on situation of human rights of migrant workers and their families. The conference had the participation of 140 representatives from 28 nations. In 2020, the Commission has renewed its letter of understanding with the Human Rights Council of Malaysia, which is a destination country for many migrant workers.

This year the Commission has issued 69 press notes and published 18 publications. Similarly, to aid Government and concerned stakeholders in law making process, it reviewed various bills from the human rights perspective and made recommendations.

Despite the achievements discussed above, there still are challenges as recommendations made by the Commission in the past remain to be effectively implemented, owing to low Government response. The Commission has 288 on its list of human rights violators but the state of recommended legal actions against them remains unsatisfactory. Instead, many on the list have been rewarded. Further, the office of the Commission that was damaged by the earthquake of 2015 remains to be rebuilt.

The Nepal Human Rights Commission commits to continue its efforts to ensure human rights of all and welcomes cooperation of civil society organizations like INSEC that have been working in the sector. The Commission looks forward to continued collaboration.

Finally, I congratulate INSEC for its commendable efforts to document human rights violations.

Office of the Prime Minister and Council of Ministers

It’s a pleasure to know about the publication of Human Rights Year Book, 2021. I believe the book will be useful to inform all about the progress and overall situation of human rights in the country. The Government of Nepal is committed to respect, protect and promote fundamental rights, laws to enforce them, and Nepal’s international commitments.

COVID-19 has created challenges to Nepal and the whole world for ensuring human rights. The work of Nepal in controlling, reducing and adopting treatment of COVID-19, has produced effective results. The work of providing free vaccination against COVID-19 to all citizens, prioritized on the basis of vulnerability, has already commenced.

Nepal submitted its report of Universal Periodic Review third cycle in October 2020 at the Human Rights Council of the United Nations and its review was concluded by the Council on January 21, 2021. The world, during the review, has praised the progress of Nepal in the protection and promotion of human rights in the last four and half years. The review has provided recommendations and the Government is committed to fulfill them. The Government has accepted and implemented the fifth national action plans on human rights in 2020. The action plans were prepared specifying the responsibilities and time frame of all three tiers of governments regarding Constitution of Nepal, laws made for implementation of fundamental rights, UPR recommendations accepted by Nepal, recommendations from treaties to which Nepal is a party, provisions of Nepal's 15th national development work plans, decisions of the Supreme Court and the National Human Rights Commission. Similarly, the Common Core Document, which is an inseparable component of reports submitted to various bodies on human rights is in the process of acceptance.

I want to mention the widespread collaboration with civil society for the preparation of the report of the Universal Periodic Review, Fifth National Action Plans on Human Rights and Common Core Document, based on the practice of consultations with the National Human Rights Commission and other civil society bodies for preparing laws, policies, plans and programs regarding human rights. On behalf of the Office of the Prime Minister and Council of Ministers, I would like to thank civil society organizations, particularly INSEC for its collaboration, during the consultations and discussions with civil societies. I expect that similar collaboration will continue in the future.

Finally, I would like to wish for increased trust and utility of the yearbook and its acceptance as a reference by concerned stakeholders. Once again, congratulations for the publication!

The year 2020 remained challenging due to the outbreak of COVID-19 pandemic. Like many other countries, Nepal too felt impacts of the pandemic on the livelihood, economy, and public health system. The Government of Nepal responded to the pandemic through measures, such as prevention, control, isolation, quarantine and treatment and has adopted various health and safety protocols in compliance with WHO guidelines. Free testing and treatment services have been provided to the needy people. Nepal thus, has been able to keep low mortality and higher recovery rates among the COVID-19 patients.

Strengthening the health care system, protecting people's lives, and building a sustainable and resilient recovery remained priorities of the government throughout the year. Nepal has already initiated necessary preparation and coordination to ensure availability of vaccines. Focus has also been given to mitigating the adverse socio-economic impacts of the pandemic and maintaining the conducive environment for people to enjoy all human rights, including the economic, social and cultural rights.

Amidst the global crisis of COVID-19 pandemic, Nepal supported the "Appeal for Global Ceasefire" made by the UN Secretary General António Guterres. Nepal also endorsed "Water, Sanitation and Hygiene: World Leaders' Call to Action on COVID-19" on 14 May 2020, calling for the need of coordinated efforts in making water, sanitation and hygiene for all, eliminating inequalities and leaving no one behind.

The Nepali diplomatic missions continued offering uninterrupted consular and diplomatic services to the migrant workers and facilitated the safe repatriation of trafficked and stranded Nepali citizens, while also extending necessary legal assistance, awareness campaigns and counselling services to the migrant workers as the case may be. Thousands of stranded Nepalis were brought to home from 25 countries.

In 2020, Nepal got elevated to a lower-middle income country and also made some improvements in the HDI value as reflected in the Human Development Report, 2020. Nepal aspires to graduate from the LDC status as early as possible and achieve a middle - income country status by 2030, and realise Sustainable Development Goals to fulfill the national aspiration of “Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepali”.

National Women Commission

The National Women Commission has been continuously working on the rights of women based on Constitution of Nepal, international commitments and national. The Commission operates a helpline service for reducing and controlling violence against women. It has aided also supported and encouraged women to register complaints using the toll-free number 1145 for legal assistance.

The Commission continued the helpline service during the Covid-19 pandemic. It has also been coordinating and collaborating with all agencies and organizations working for controlling and reducing violence against women, and the promotion of women rights. INSEC has been assisting the Commission’s work in the areas of women rights and for addressing gender-based discrimination.

The support of INSEC in the realization of inclusive development through participation of women was noteworthy. I also expect continued collaboration with the organization while the Commission works to ensure women rights and address the challenges associated with reducing violence against women.

Finally,, INSEC’s efforts to report human rights violations through the Human Rights Year Book every year is praiseworthy. I expect, INSEC to continue this work and congratulate the team there for the publication of the 2020 year-book.

National Inclusive Commission

I am pleased to understand INSEC is publishing Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2020 like it has done in the past on the human rights situation. I would also like to thank INSEC for providing me opportunity to express the perceptions of Inclusive Commission, and also congratulate INSEC and wish the yearbook will be useful for all.

Article 259 of section 27 of the Constitution of Nepal, 2015 and the National Inclusive Commission Act, 2017 have specified the work, responsibilities and rights of the Commission. It has been conducting studies and providing recommendations to concerned departments regarding the rights and protection of rights of people of Khas Arya, marginalized, disabled, senior citizens, laborers, farmers, marginalized and people of the Karnali Province who are economically marginalized. As a body working for the protection of rights of vulnerable people, it has been carrying out studies and providing recommendations for the protection of human rights of such people. The Government of Nepal has been doing its best to ensure rights of such people. However, there is need of separate and prioritized programs for the deprived populations. There is need for inclusion of such programs in policies, annual plans and budgets of the federal, provincial and local governments.

Nepal and the whole world were terrorized by the Covid 19 pandemic in 2020. COVID-19 has further marginalized people with disability, senior citizens, workers, farmers and people from vulnerable groups in more vulnerability. During the difficult time, the Commission has organized discussions on different issues of rights of those people and recommended the outcomes to the concerned departments. Studies on the problems faced by vulnerable groups were also carried out disseminated.

Even though all levels of government have provided relief for protection of basic human rights of vulnerable people, the support was not adequate. This Commission expects assistance of all tiers of governments, media, private and non-governmental organizations, civil society and all citizens for supporting vulnerable people from different social groups.

Under-secretary and Spokesperson

Tharu Commission

1. Like many countries around the world Nepal had to enforce lockdowns to prevent the spread of COVID-19. The lockdowns posed difficulties to the Tharu Community as well. Many youths of the Tharu community work as construction laborers and the lockdown deprived them of employment and timely wages leading to problems of food and shelter. Many were forced to travel home on foot from the cities where they worked.
2. The Tharu community is mainly dependent on agriculture and delays in the supply of fertilizers resulted in lower production that could push the community towards poverty.
3. Many non-Tharu have used land belonging to the Tharu as collateral in banks and have absconded without repaying the loans. The banks have begun seizure of the collateral and this has created problems for the original land owners.
4. The tradition of accusing women of witchcraft runs deep in the community and women have been severely affected.
5. Most of the clan deities of the Tharu are located in Government's land and in forest areas that where the Tharu are not permitted to enter. This has threatened traditional practices.
6. There is ban on collection of herbs from buffer zones of National Parks has affected the Tharu practice of traditional medicine.

The receipt of around 200 complaints at the Commission from districts in Madhesh and all over Nepal shows widespread prevalence of human rights violations of the Madhesi community. 2. The staff at the Commission are not permanent and this hampered the work and staff have been transferred without the consent of the Commission.

We are happy to learn about the publication of the Human Rights Year Book 2021 by INSEC. Human rights has become the yardstick for assessing progress of all civilized societies. It is the first priority of the State to guarantee human rights of citizens.

Nepal Police is an agency that ensures the implementation of rights and laws of the land. APF is committed to control and reduce human rights violations in Nepal. For realizing these commitments, it established its Human Rights Cell on January 13, 2003 at its headquarters at Halchowk, Kathmandu. The staff of the APF are also sent to participate in advanced trainings on laws and provisions regarding human rights at national and international levels. This has aided in building a pool of in-house trainers. In 2020, the APF trained 5,535 staff on human rights.

Nepal Bar Association

It is a pleasure of Nepal Bar Association to get the information of the publication of Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2021 by your organization like in the previous years. We believe, the organization has publicized truths and facts of situation of human rights with the primary data collected through the field based monitoring conducted during 2020.

Nepal Bar Association's evaluation and observation of human rights situation during the year 2020 reveal that the situation of rule of law, access to the justice, individual freedoms, and human rights were not found satisfactory. The cases of prevalence of murders, critical criminal cases, voluntarily carried prosecutions, abduction, sexual abuse, increase in rape cases, confinement in rights to expression, arrests against the orders of court, contempt to the interim orders, forceful interventions and with the changed situations due to Covid-19, Nepal Bar Association realized that the state's performance and commitment towards human rights protection is inadequate and declined.

Federation of Nepalese Journalists (FNJ) is an organization of journalists working to defend the Freedom of Expression and media freedoms. FNJ respects efforts of other organizations working for the protection and advocacy of human rights. INSEC has been doing commendable work in collecting data on human rights violations. I want congratulate INSEC on the publication of “Nepal Human Rights Year Book 2021” that brings together data on human rights violations in the past year.

FNJ has been continuously monitoring the press freedom situation in Nepal. It regularly follow up incidents of threats, attack, arrest of journalists. In 2020 too journalists faced various challenges and barriers in their professional practice. The federal and provincial governments enacted various media laws without consulting concerned stakeholders. These laws have shrunk the space for free expression and added more challenges on the professional security of the journalists.

There were three main media laws registered or under discussion in federal parliament. Nepal Government had drafted new law on the ‘Nepal Media Council’ in April, 2019. FNJ realized that the law would restrict freedom of the press and infringe into the freedom and autonomy of the Council and organized protests demanding amendments in the provisions. This led the Government to amend some provisions and the new version was sent to parliament. However, provisions in the bill are still restrictive and seek to keep the Council under government control, which is something that needs to be opposed and discouraged.

Similarly, the Development and Technology Committee of parliament has already prepared its report on a bill regarding information technology after discussions in the committee. However, the report has not been registered in parliament. This bill also has many provisions against freedom of expression and media, particularly in terms of controls on online media. Another bill taken to the National Assembly by the government concerns public service broadcasting. The bill also includes provisions that give government more control on public media.

Provincial governments have also been enacting different laws on media and many bills are being readied for discussion in the provincial legislatures. All of the new local laws restrict media freedoms and also largely disregard Nepal's international commitments relating to such laws.

FNJ recorded 52 violations of freedom of the press between 1 January 2020 to 31 December 2020. There were 50 such violations in 2019.

In 2020, FNJ reported 32 cases of misbehavior and threats against journalists. Similarly, there were nine cases of attack on journalists, and five arrests of journalists. Additionally, there were four cases recorded were of disruption/obstruction and disturbances to media work and two cases related to professional insecurity.

The social and political changes in Nepal have transformed the fundamental structure of the state. In democracy, Social justice can be ensured through the human rights friendly rule of law and accountability of the state. The issues of Nepal's peace process and political transformation profounded on the basis of 12-Points Agreement and Comprehensive Peace Accord seems to be ignored.
