JUNE 2022

Our responsibility, Our Opportunity: Revisiting Economics and Finance to Accelerate Action for People & Planet

The challenge is to correct the gross misallocation of capital that is depleting natural resources and ecosystems, while eroding social foundations and trust in public institutions. Our responsibility is to accelerate policy and investment shifts for an inclusive, green, system-wide socioeconomic transformation that creates new sustainable development pathways and ensures prosperity for all within planetary boundaries. Our opportunity is the Stockholm+50 Conference, bringing together global leaders to urgently accelerate action on the SDGs.

14th edition of the International Economic Forum on Latin America and the Caribbean

The green transition can be an opportunity to move towards a more sustainable development model that puts Latin Americans' well-being at its core. Clear and coordinated strategies for the green transition can help overcome LAC's structural development traps and attract sustainable investments for recovery. Greener productive policies must both increase productivity and make production models more sustainable. Making this possible requires close collaboration between the public sector, business, academia, trade unions and civil society organizations. The role of green financing and international partnerships will also be key to moving towards a more sustainable future.
